"Lest We Forget"—A Triology—Armistice Day, 1918

THE APPEAL
IN FLANDERS FIELDS
By Lieut.-Colonel JOHN McCRAE, Physician
(Died while on duty in Flanders.)

In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly,
Scarce heard among the guns below.
We are the dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe:
To you from failing hands, we throw
The torch. Be yours to hold it high!
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields.

THE PLEDGE
AMERICA'S ANSWER
By R. W. LILLARD

Rest ye in peace, ye Flanders dead,
The fight that ye so bravely led
We've taken up. And we will keep
True faith with you who lie asleep
With each a cross to mark his bed,
And poppies blowing overhead,
Where once his own life blood ran red.
So let your rest be sweet and deep
In Flanders fields.

Fear not that ye have died for naught;
The torch ye threw to us we caught.
Ten million hands will hold it high,
And Freedom's light shall never die.
We've learned the lesson that ye taught
In Flanders fields.

THE FULFILLMENT
A MESSAGE
To Lieutenant-Colonel John McCrae and His Comrades in Flanders Fields
By GEORGE PROPHETER

Sleep, and rest in peace, McCrae.
We caught "the torch," we've won the day
"That marks our place" whereat the foe,
Now kneeling, and with head bowed low,
The mercy craves his bloody sway
Ne'er showed to living thing that lay
Across his path to block his way
To make the world live speechless woe
To feed his lust.

So, sleep in peace, those "faithful" pray
And pledge their further faith this day:
Long as larks sing, and "poppies blow,"
Shall memory's altar be aglow
With love for ye who sleep for aye
In Flanders fields!

Adhere to World Court On Senate Conditions

President Coolidge In Armistice Day Speech Says United States Would Adhere to World Court Only on Conditions Laid Down by Senate—Formally Calls for Conscription of Capital As Well As Man Power In Time of War.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 11 (AP).—President Coolidge served formal notice here today that the United States would adhere to the World Court only on the conditions laid down by the Senate.

The position of the Chief Executive, who from the first of his administration had urged American membership in the Court, was made clear in an Armistice Day speech in which he discussed world problems and called formally for the first time for conscription of capital as well as man power in time of war.

The address was in dedication of the Liberty Memorial, erected by the people of this city in memory of its citizens who served in the World War. Delivered at the hour when eight years ago the Armistice went into effect, it was devoted to a discussion of problems arising out of the war with a restating of the position of the Washington government on many questions of world interest while mention was made of national antagonisms against this country.

"A Permanent Court of International Justice has been established," the President said in setting forth his position on the World Court, "to which nations may voluntarily resort for an adjudication of their differences. It has been subject to much misrepresentation, which has resulted in much misconception of its principles and objects among our people. I have advocated adherence to such a court by this Nation on condition that the statute or treaty creating it be amended to meet our views. The Senate has adopted a resolution for that purpose.

Won't Ask Modification.

"While the nations involved can not yet be said to have made a final determination, and from most of them no answer has been received, many of them have indicated that they are unwilling to concur in the conditions adopted by the resolution of the senate. While no final decision can be made by our government until final answers are received, the situation has been sufficiently developed so that I feel warranted in saying that I do not intend to ask the senate to modify its position. I do not believe the senate would take favorable action on any such proposal, and unless the requirements of the senate resolution are met by the other interested nations I can see no prospect of this country adhering to the court."

Should Call Men and Property.

In speaking of conscription, Mr. Coolidge said that it "is more and more becoming the conviction of students of adequate defense that in time of national peril the government should be clothed with authority to call into its service all of its man power and all of its property under such terms and conditions that it may completely avoid making a sacrifice of one and a profiteer of another."

"To expose some men to the perils of the battle field while others are left to reap large gains from the distress of their country is not in harmony with our ideal of equality," he said. "Any future policy of conscription should be all inclusive, applicable in its terms to the entire personnel and the entire wealth of the whole nation."

Our Loss from World War.

It is often said that we profited from the World War. We did not profit from it, but lost from it in common with all countries engaged in it. Some individuals made gains, but the Nation suffered great losses. Merely in the matter of our national debt, it will require heavy sacrifices extended over a period of about 20 years to recoup those losses. What we suffered indirectly in the diminution of our commerce and through the deflation which occurred when we had to terminate the expenditure of our capital and begin to live on our income is a vast sum which can never be estimated. The war left us with debts and mortgages, without counting our obligations to our veterans, which it will take a generation to discharge. High taxes, insolvent banks, ruined industry, distressed agriculture, all followed in its train. While the period of liquidation appears to have been passed, long years of laborious toil on the part of the people will be necessary to repair our loss. It was not because our resources had not been impaired, but because they were so great that we could meantime finance these losses while they are being restored, that we have been able so early to revive our prosperity. But the money which we are making today has to be used in part to replace

Thousands Cheer Coolidge Speech At Kansas City

Dedication of Memorial to War Dead Brings Huge Throng from All Sections—President Speaks Without Hat or Overcoat in Face of Biting Wind.

Kansas City, Nov. 11 (AP).—Acceptance of the principal role in the dedication of Kansas City's memorial today found President Coolidge returning to the spot where five years ago as vice president he assisted in placing the corner stone for the huge edifice erected to honor those who lost their lives in the World War.

In addition to President and Mrs. Coolidge and Queen Marie of Rumania, representatives of the church, the army and navy, virtually all patriotic organizations as well as scores of state and civic units, held a place on the program.

Welcomed on Arrival.

A battery of Missouri artillery opened the day with a salute of 48 guns and then took up position for the presidential salute of 21 guns to welcome the Coolidge party at 8:30 o'clock. Events then were arranged to center on the President's address at the memorial immediately following the tolling of bells at 11, the anniversary of the signing of the Armistice.

After an hour at the memorial, the presidential luncheon was arranged to entertain the visitors until time for an inspection of Kansas City, Kansas. This was the last scheduled event to permit the return of the entourage to the special train and the start of the return journey to Washington.

Crowds Line Streets.

Friendly crowds which lined the streets from the Union station to the Hotel Muehlebach welcomed the President and Mrs. Coolidge upon their arrival. A military escort comprising a troop of cavalry from Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, several regiments of Boy Scouts, American Legionnaires and Girl Scouts in uniform gave the event an appropriate Armistice Day touch.

The President upon arrival at the hotel went to the suite reserved for him to rest until the reception committee called to escort him to Liberty Hill for the dedication of the great Liberty Memorial.

Entering their automobile soon after ten o'clock to the accompaniment of cheers of the crowd, they drove the two miles to the memorial.

A salute of trumpets greeted them as they walked to the speakers' stand with Secretary Dwight Davis of the War Department, Governors Baker and Paulen of Missouri and Kansas, respectively, Senator Capper of Kansas and other officials.

The exercises began with a call to worship by a bugle corps and the invocation by the Rev. J. N. V. McKay, Roman Catholic priest of Kansas City.

Chorus of 500 Voices.

A memorial ode, "Heroes of Our Homeland," written for the occasion, was then rendered by a chorus of 500 voices that included white garbed Red Cross nurses.

About the stand sat war veterans, mothers and relatives of the war dead. Reserve Officers and Boy Scouts. Beyond for a quarter of a mile stood tens of thousands of citizens from the entire southwest. The exercises reached all clearly through loud speakers, while the radio carried the music to uncounted thousands more.

Crowd Stands in Silence.

As the voices subsided, a bugler sounded Taps. Rolling drums took up the last notes of the bugle. Then, for a moment, the vast throng stood in silence.

As eleven o'clock, moment of the Armistice came, bells were tolled eleven times by Joe Damico, a buck private in the war. There was a pause for silence, as the huge throng stood bareheaded and then President Coolidge began his address.

Ignoring the biting wind, the President stood on the platform bareheaded, his overcoat discarded, and coat unbuttoned.

Applause Greets Address.

The first applause came when he mentioned the names of Major Leonard Wood, as one of the commanders of the 89th division, which was raised in this section, and Secretary Davis of the war department, a native of Missouri.

Again there was applause when he declared America was one, and that all her soldiers in the war were Americans whatever the country of their birth. His assertions that America must protect itself and that the first duty of Americans was to maintain the supremacy of American rights also drew applause.

The applause was mingled with a cheer as the President declared his position on the World Court and concluded after speaking 42 minutes.

The President and Mrs. Coolidge were then escorted to the Hotel President for a public luncheon.

Memorial a Massive Structure.

Embodying Egyptian, Greek, and modern American architecture, the structure extends for 600 feet along the crown of Memorial Hill, facing the Union station and the city's business district. As the visitor leaves the station he views the massive monument of Indiana limestone in the natural cream, buff and grey. Rising behind the 50 foot north wall a huge shaft towers more than 240 feet above the court. Forty-ton stone angles crown the shaft at the four points of the compass, while from its center roll clouds of steam on which lights play at night to give the appearance of a boiling crater.

May Ask Pope to Annul Marriage

London Hears Duke of Marlborough Is Seeking to Have Marriage With the Former Consuelo Vanderbilt Nullified.

London, Nov. 11 (AP).—It is reported that the Duke of Marlborough is seeking to have his marriage with the former Consuela Vanderbilt of New York nullified by Pope Pius. The Westminster Gazette says that it understands the duke, whose present wife was the former Gladys Marie Deacon, daughter of Edward Parker Deacon of Boston, desires to embrace the Roman Catholic faith.

Marlborough in 1895 married Miss Vanderbilt in New York. The function was reported at the time to have cost the Vanderbilt family $1,000,000. The couple lived together for 12 years. Then there was a disagreement and the Duchess sued for divorce on technical grounds of desertion and misconduct. The duke did not contest the suit and the divorce was granted.

Two sons were born of the union—the Marquis of Blandford and Lord Ivor Spencer-Churchill. The duchess is now married to Jacques Balsan, a Frenchman. The duke married Miss Deacon in Paris in 1921. A Presbyterian minister officiated. He read the Church of England's service but left out the word "obey."

An unidentified Roman Catholic authority, whom the Westminster Gazette quotes, asserts that the Catholic Church does not want the duke "unless there is really just cause." He is said to have added that before the duke can be received by the church "the stain of his divorce will have to be wiped out and he will have to undergo a period of informal preparation and instruction."

Two Minutes of Silence in City

As the fire bells solemnly tolled at 11 o'clock this morning the citizens of Kingston stood for two minutes and offered a silent prayer for the memory of the hero dead who died during the World War. Today was Armistice Day, marking the eighth anniversary of the termination of the World War. While Kingston was honoring its hero dead this morning all over the country at the same hour the citizenry stood in the two minute silent interval, praying for those who had paid the supreme sacrifice. In the city's industrial plants and business houses work was suspended during the two minute period.

EIGHTY LIVE SKUNKS FURNISH BIG PROBLEM

St. Paul, Nov. 11 (AP)—Commissioner J. F. Gould of the state game and fish department, was confronted today with the disposal of eighty skunks.

Warden T. K. Fikken of Ada, wired his chief, "I confiscated 80 live skunks in the township of Chelly. What do you want me to do with them?"

The skunks cannot be shipped to St. Paul because the express company refuses to accept the animals unless they are deodorized, and the state, Mr. Gould says, is not interested in deodorizing skunks

Victory Ball at Armory Tonight

Famous Orchestra to Furnish Music—Concert Program From 8 to 9 o'clock—Record Attendance Expected.

The stage is all set for the American Legion Victory Ball at the armory tonight. The weather has cooled off sufficiently to make it comfortable to enjoy a long evening of dancing, the weather man says it will be clear and cold tonight, although not cold enough to freeze up motor cars that will be parked on the spacious parking grounds of the local armory.

A big feature of tonight's ball will be the concert from 8 to 9 o'clock, and everyone is urged to be there not later than 8 o'clock so as not to miss any of the enjoyment. For those who wish to enjoy the concert, listen to the Ipana Troubadours play their entrancing dance music, and to sit above the scene and watch the sights, the gallery in the armory is recommended. There you won't miss a thing and yet you will not be in the crowd.

The music, of course, will be supplied by the original Ipana Troubadours, with "Smiling" Sam Lanin personally conducting. The Troubadours will consist of 12 master-musicians and the conductor.

Delicious refreshments will be served and nothing will be left undone to insure the enjoyment of all who attend.

All signs point to the Victory Ball being one of the greatest social events in Kingston.

Tickets should be purchased at the door of the armory tonight, which will open at 7 o'clock.

By stipulation of counsel, the hearing on today's motions was adjourned for completion on Monday.

TAFT DENIES EXPRESSING OPINION ON PROHIBITION

New York, Nov. 11 (AP)—Chief Justice William Howard Taft has written to State Assemblyman Louis A. Cuvillier here denying that he has expressed any personal opinion as to prohibition since he went on the bench.

Mr. Cuvillier wrote to Mr. Taft asking if he were correctly quoted as opposed to light wines and beer in a pamphlet circulated by the National Temperance Society.

Mr. Taft replied that "it is quite possible that in the days when I was a private citizen I may have expressed such an opinion, but I certainly never have expressed such an opinion since I came on the bench. It would have been quite improper for me to do so."

Nation Observes Armistice Day as Tribute to Dead

Americans Commemorate End of World War Eight Years Ago By Patriotic Observance And Minute Of Silence At Hour When Armistice Was Signed.

Washington, Nov. 11 (AP)—The world paused a moment today in the frenzied struggle for existence and aggrandizement to recollect that exactly eight years ago there had come the winging word from France that gripped men's hearts as no other message could have done.

The great war was over, the roaring, destroying guns stilled at last.

An ecstasy of rejoicing and triumph had followed. In that first wild burst there was no thought of the maze of perplexities that was to beset the pathways of peace. What mattered it, the boys were coming home.

They came, and grateful nations poured out a lavish greeting to gallant sons. The spoils of glory due to valor were showered upon them in every city and hamlet.

The Unknown Soldier.

Then came one home to America—dead and unknown, who could not hear the cheering. About him centered such a majestic tribute to all those who lay dead in France as the price of victory that it gave Armistice day a new and solemn meaning to all Americans.

Today as always the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington cemetery was the heart of the American observance of Armistice day. In the words of Congress and of the President's proclamation, it typified "our gratitude for peace and our desire for the continuance of friendly relations with all other people."

Britain's and Canada's Tributes.

Representatives of the dominions of the British Empire, in conference at London, joined in England's tribute to the day, standing with members of the cabinet as King George, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York laid wreaths at the foot of the cenotaph of England's unknown. A wreath of maple leaves, brought from the Kingsmere cottage of Premier Mackenzie King near Ottawa, and interwoven with roses and chrysanthemums, formed Canada's tribute.

Out of the new significance of the day as sacred to those who did not come back living from France has grown the simple observances all over the nation which mark Armistice day.

President at Missouri's Memorial.

Everywhere it was guided by the desire of each community, as in Missouri it centered about the memorial to Missouri's war dead at Kansas City where President Coolidge went to voice again the will of his countrymen for peace and friendship with all peoples. That duty alone could have drawn him away from his usual Armistice day journey to Arlington to lay a wreath in person on the tomb of the Unknown.

Momentary Halt in Nation.

Army comrades of the war dead everywhere paid honors with flags at half staff and troops drawn up in silence to stand rigidly for a minute at 11 o'clock, the hour of the Armistice eight years ago. The national salute of twenty one guns followed from all saluting posts. Throughout the nation memorial services befitting the day marked gatherings in schools and churches and the momentary halt and silent tribute to the meaning of the day was interwoven with [illegible] business activities in many [illegible] industries.

Final Tribute to Mayor Block Paid By Rabbi Rose

Temple Emanuel Thronged at Funeral of City's Late Chief Executive—Rabbi Points Out Some Notable Characteristics and Accomplishments of the Mayor.

With the impressive ceremonies of the Jewish faith the funeral services of Mayor Morris Block were held in the Temple Emanuel on Abeel street on Wednesday afternoon with the Temple filled to overflowing with sorrowing friends and relatives, while outside the Temple were gathered a large throng of people who were unable to obtain entrance for lack of room.

Although the funeral services were to be held at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon people began to gather in front of the Temple Emanuel at 1 o'clock, and as soon as the doors were opened the Temple began to fill with those who had come to pay a last tribute of respect to the city's chief executive. Within a very few minutes the only seats that remained vacant within the Temple were those set aside for the city employes, the honorary and active pall bearers and the sorrowing members of the mayor's family.

As the city fire bells solemnly tolled, the body of Mayor Block was borne for the last time into the Temple he had loved so well. Rabbi Morris M. Rose of the Temple congregation and Rabbi M. Balogh led the funeral procession down the main aisle of the Temple toward the altar with Rabbi Rose reading from the Scriptures. Directly behind them came the honorary bearers, Mayor E. J. Dempsey, Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck, John D. Schoonmaker, Dr. George F. Chandler, Judge James Jenkins, Everett E. Fessenden, Judge John G. Van Etten, Judge Harry E. Schirick, Richard Lenehan, Dr. John G. O'Leary, Former Senator Jacob Rice, James F. Dwyer, James J. Murphy, William F. Rafferty and L. F. Bannon, followed by the active bearers, David Wetterhahn, Dr. S. T. Levitas, Max Forst, Max Reben, Felix Katz and Benjamin Furmansky, and the members of the mayor's family.

Directly in front of the altar was placed the mahogany, copper lined casket, over which was thrown a magnificent blanket of roses. The altar itself was almost hidden under the profusion of floral tributes while on each window sill of the Temple was placed a huge basket of flowers.

As the casket was placed in front of the altar the Temple mixed quartette sang "Some Time We'll Understand." Later in the service Mrs. Helen Stern Mann sang "Abide With Me," and Herman LaTour and Mrs. John B. Osterhoudt sang a duet "Heaven is My Home." The closing selection by the mixed quartette was "Lead Kindly Light."

Eloquent Tribute by Rabbi Rose.

After the reading of the Twenty-third Psalm by Rabbi Rose he paid an eloquent tribute to the memory of Mayor Block.

Rabbi Rose said in part: "We are gathered here not to honor the departed but to be honored by the emanating greatness that was his and which he shared with us. Just as when alive we were happy to be with him, even so we are now privileged to pay our loving tribute to a high minded American and a noble Jew.

"Morris Block was a proud son of his race and embodied within himself the love and loyalty which the Jewish people bear to our country in a very high degree. This he sincerely manifested both in public and private life. He was in extraordinary harmony with the noblest of Israel's heritage and the sublimest of American ideals. As a citizen of this city the highest honors were conferred upon him and he was called four times to serve the city as its chief executive. He was always honest, sincere and conscientious and always demanded the same qualities from the public servants with whom he came in contact.

"As to his executive abilities and other rare qualities necessary for a public official the many tributes that have already been expressed by our leading men in public life tell of his worth. He was a born leader and like no other man I knew, he was possessed of the rare gift of keeping people together to work for an ideal cause. Few men in public life can claim such popular admiration and love.

"An outstanding feature of his life was a fine democratic spirit which expressed itself in a simplicity not attained by many in public life. He mingled with the same ease and spirit of sympathy among the poor as well as among the more fortunate of our citizenship. Everybody felt they had a friend in him and none were denied that kindly smile which charmed all who came in contact with him.

No Hatred or Prejudice.

"He was a man of few words but profound insight into human nature. He approached all people with a spirit of understanding and always succeeded in discovering their fine qualities that he might respect and love them. He bore no hatred or prejudice toward anyone, even toward his outspoken opponents in public life. He was at all times ready for reconciliation and peace. This love for harmony and cooperation nevertheless did not affect his strength of character and moral courage. His whole being was permeated by those prophetic qualities which characterize our race. He always loved justice and fair play. In his appointments he chose the men

NOTED TRAMPS PLY ROADS IN SCOTLAND

Aged Woman Says She Never Slept in Bed.

Rannoch Moor, Scotland.—The most picturesque tramps of the United Kingdom are Scotsmen who ply the broad high road which runs along Loch Lomond and across the wild and desolate Rannoch moor to Inverness.

Probably the best known is "Long Jock." For half a century this totally blind mendicant has fiddled his way along the Perthshire roads, accompanied by two dogs. He shares all his meals with the dogs and at night wraps his six-foot tartan plaid about them and himself and sleeps out under a tree.

"Old Johnson" is another. He's a genial fellow in a Balmoral bonnet and tattered frock coat. He has a wealth of humor and is known to be a master of repartee. He has been on the road for 80 years.

Highland tramps, or "tinkers," as they are called around Rannoch moor, speak the Gaelic language. They move in clans and are known by the family names, which often go back for centuries. The oldest member of the clan is the chief and his word is law. They are strict Sabbatarians and will not even blow their bagpipes for alms on Sunday.

One old woman who has been on the tramp in the western highlands for 75 years boasts that she has never slept in a bed. She has brought up a family on the king's highway and wears a wedding ring that has been handed down from mother to daughter in her clan for 300 years.

They have a jolly life. Every five or six miles along the road is a "tramp's hotel"—a barn or hut where they can rest for the night or find shelter from the storms. The highland farmers and shepherds know them by name and exchange greetings whenever they meet.

Taxes and bank failures never worry them and at the end there is a tramp cemetery in Stirlingshire called "No Man's Land."

Milwaukee.—Michael Vasse wanted to flip a coin for $5,000 in court here, but the judge overruled him.

Vasse is being sued for divorce. Settlement of the estate was being considered. It was decided that Vasse was to get only $5,000 of the property, which is valued at $10,000.

"Make it $10,000 or nothing," he said, drawing a coin from his pocket.

"No gambling permitted in this court," the judge said. Vasse pocketed his coin and the $5,000 and went away. He spied his daughter in a corridor, bent to kiss her and broke into tears.

Washington.—Two hundred Zulus were arrested near Eshowe, native capital of Zululand, by South African police for inciting a revolt among tribesmen, according to a recent dispatch from Cape Town. A witch doctor, presiding over a ceremonial, was about to murder a woman that "war tonic" for the warriors might be extracted from her hands when the police raided the assembly.

"Revolts among the Zulus are not common occurrences today," says a bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Since the British defeated the Zulus in 1879, following intermittent savage raids on the Cape colonies, the Zulus have gradually ceased their hostilities and have been somewhat amenable to the influence of Christian missionaries representing many creeds and countries. Zulu history seethes with narratives of bloody conquests, beginning when the principal tribe numbered a few thousand toward the end of the Eighteenth century, and lasting until they were finally subdued by the whites.

A Tribe of Native "F. F. Z.'s."

"The Zulus are the 'F. F. Z.'s' of Zululand. The men are physical giants, with more than average intelligence of South African natives, and a native dignity that marks them as true aristocrats in their own environment. Unlike other tribes who continued to use primitive methods of warfare, the Zulus studied the modern British system and established a well-trained native army. This development made it possible for them to conquer hostile tribes until they dominated the native population of the Cape and caused the British to lose many men before their resistance was overcome.

"The women are also excellent physical specimens; strong, erect, and graceful. Both men and women are lively and sociable, gifted with natural ability and they display the proud bearing of conquerers.

"The Zulu roamed at will over South Africa before the conquest by the white man, but most of them now inhabit the highlands of Zululand, a semi-tropical reserve in the northeastern part of Natal province, which has been set aside by the British government for their use. Zululand is slightly larger than New Jersey with a population about twice that of Trenton. Except for a few white settlements dotting the 210-mile harborless coast on the Indian ocean, and a few scattered white settlers in the inland villages, the reserve is populated entirely by the natives. As far as possible, the British permit them to govern themselves, but the provincial government of Natal and the South African parliament keep an ever-watchful eye on their activities.

"When the Zulu boy has found an affinity, who may be one of many, he declares himself to her father, and is informed how much 'lobola' is necessary to affect a legal marriage. 'Lobola' consists of a gift of from ten to twenty cattle to the father-in-law as a guarantee of good faith, and evidence that the prospective husband is able to provide. The title to the cattle and their offspring do not pass to the father of the girl, although he receives and holds possession of them, but to the children for whose benefit the 'lobola' is held in trust. Should there be no children, and in event of the death or divorce of the wife, the cattle are returned to the husband, provided he has been kind and faithful. If he is guilty of cruelty and is divorced, all rights are forfeited and the cattle are held for the benefit of the divorced wife.

No Woman Suffrage.

"The women do the work and provide for the family. The men attend the herds and hunt. A wife hoes the fields and reaps the harvest, but her husband cannot appropriate any part of the grain or stores which she has laid by. It is her duty to provide food for the husband and children and care for the 'kraal'—the Zulu home consisting of a fenced-in cattle pen, surrounded by the native huts. If any member of the family must hire out as a domestic, the lot usually falls to the man, as the women seldom leave their homes. Native men are employed in the villages as cooks, waiters, housemen, washmen, messengers and nurses, and in most cases are superior to women as servants. A Zulu tribesman, with feather-bedecked head, pulling a 'rickshaw' is a common sight in Natal.

Get Spanking at School, Then Another at Home

Uniontown, Pa.—Corporal punishment may not be administered in Uniontown schools until teachers first have received the written consent of parents of unruly pupils, but the pupils fail to see how the new order, which went into effect this year, is of any benefit to them.

Under the new procedure parents are informed that their child has been guilty of some infraction of school regulations and are asked permission to administer the proper punishment.

Not only do parents freely accord the permission, the students contend, but administer an additional whipping.

Owners Agree To Consolidation

More Than Enough Stockholders of Local Electric Companies Have Agreed to Insure Plan—Tardy Stockholders Asked to Act Promptly.

While the deposit of shares by stockholders of Central Hudson Gas & Electric Company and of United Hudson Electric Corporation will continue until all have been turned in, a large majority and more than a sufficient number had been deposited by Wednesday to warrant proceeding at once to put the consolidation plan into effect.

Accordingly a meeting of stockholders has been called for November 24 to formally ratify the proposed consolidation, this to be followed immediately by an application to the Public Service Commission for its approval.

The committee composed of T. R. Beal, J. L. Wilkie and F. A. Burnes has declared the plan operative and the necessary legal steps to make the consolidation effective will be taken at once. It is expected that by January 1 this will have been accomplished and Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation will come into existence.

The necessary majority of shares to make the plan effective was reached several days ahead of schedule, November 15 having been fixed as the date.

According to Central Hudson officials, the fact that a sufficient majority has now been obtained does not mean that it is unnecessary for those who have not yet turned in their shares to do so.

"All shares should be turned in without delay in order that certificates of the new company can be issued to stockholders," said P. A. Burns, secretary of the company, today. "The depository, we find, is making a special effort to keep up with the deposits and is issuing certificates as rapidly as they can be made out. When the consolidation is finally made effective, these certificates will be called in and the new permanent certificates will be issued to shareholders. All of this entails a great deal of work and time and for that reason we are urging stockholders to act as promptly as possible."

Girl Victim of Mistaken Identity

Fifteen Year Old Girl, Slain In Chicago, Resembled Neighbor Who Had Received Threatening Letters From Dismissed Suitor.

Chicago, Nov. 11 (AP)—Shot down as she was hurrying home through the dusk from a violin lesson, fifteen year old Victoria Dorothy Delemata was slain, police believed today, as a result of mistaken identity.

The girl's mother heard her cry as she fell mortally wounded in the middle of the street near her stepfather's delicatessen store.

A theory that the girl, a pupil in the Chicago Heights High School, was slain when she fled from the advances of some loiterer was discredited when it was discovered that two shots had been fired from as far away as the sidewalk. Police argued that such an assailant would be unlikely to fire more than once if at all, and the girl apparently had not been harmed before she was mortally wounded.

Detectives then learned that Victoria resembled a Miss Helen Lagura, who lives near the delicatessen and who a short time ago received a threatening letter from a suitor she dismissed.

Also it was found that an unidentified man had forced his way into the girl's home to look at the body, had become agitated and had fled to a waiting automobile when attempts were made to question him.

Fire Destroyed Mt. Airy House

The Mt. Airy House, situated on the hill at Quarryville, was totally destroyed by fire Wednesday morning. The house was owned by Herman Starr of New York city and was said to be valued at $25,000. The house was insured for $18,000 in H. T. Keeney's agency at Saugerties. A policy for $3,000 in the Morse agency was cancelled a few days ago.

The origin of the fire is unknown. Its discovery was made by nearby residents, and as there were no facilities for fighting the fire the building and contents were destroyed.

The Mt. Airy House was a popular summer resort with accommodations for one hundred guests. It was originally owned and conducted by the late Samuel Hommel. Since the Hommel family disposed of it, it had changed hands several times. Mr. Starr, the last owner, purchased it of Louis Jaeger, who bought it at a mortgage foreclosure sale.

Feminine Finery Marks New Modes

An Era of Frilly Fashions Scheduled to Follow Boyish Costumes.

This season one sees (marching side by side and intermingling) two decided style tendencies—the boyish simplicity softened by a frill or two and by many lovely fabrics, yet for all its popularity, observes a fashion writer in the Kansas City Star, one recognizes it as a mighty wave of fashion that reached its crest and will begin its recession. The incoming tide brings feminine frills and fringes, feathers, plaitings and flounces. A season when the long skirt, almost Victorian in its lines, vies with the shortest skirt within the memory of living man.

A season when velvet is proclaimed as a leading fabric, tweeds and homespuns are equally smart. Among the heads cropped to boyish lines the longer tresses are coifed in graceful lines. Not that the bob is passing out of the picture; surely as more feminine fashions gain headway the bob will become a feminine thing rather than an absurd imitation of a man's.

That day has not yet arrived, but predictions of its coming are with us daily. 'Tis a novel thing—that severe boyish bob—and an epoch-maker in the record of styles as truly as a mark of the 1925 period effects as the full skirt is a mark of 1890.

When a short skirt can grow no shorter then comes the opportunity of the long skirt—a novelty. Paul Poiret gaily sponsors it in uneven hemlines, right down to ankle-length—great puffed sleeves which, by the way, the tall slender girl is making the most of right now while they are new. The short ones and the plump ones will never have a chance to even play at wearing these fascinating sleeves that billow out from some point near the elbow to the hand.

His skirts are considerably longer than those seen in other houses. Poiret believes in ancient tenets, so he veils the limbs to within a few inches of the ankle. His line is too varied to be tied down to one particular type. All the skirts have fullness—some are plaited; others have full gathers from the waist with a tight-fitting corsage. Panels and flounces are used copiously.

"Wool crepe makes one look slender." By that compelling phrase the house of Chanel scored a triumph for this fabric, which does deserve consideration for its clinging qualities and its lack of luster. Moreover, Chanel shows wool crepe in a one-piece dress which has overlaid bands (eight) which form a delightful series of tiers around the entire figure.

The diagonal line is as popular in fashionable dresses as a path across a park. Every leading house of Paris is showing some form of diagonal treatment either by the direction of the flounces or a pin-tuck arrangement.

Evening wraps of velvet revel in the diagonal line, which usually runs from the shoulder to hem and is edged with fur.

It is in the mode du soir that the new tendencies receive their fullest expression. While black predominates in daytime costumes, an amazing shower of gold and silver has transformed the formal mode into a magnificent spectacle. Beads, paillettes, fringes, feathers and fur are employed jointly and separately on the most shimmering of metal cloths, and no theme is too luxurious for the autumn evenings. However skeptical you may be about intricate styling in daytime fashions, you may be as luxuriously ornate as you wish for dinner, the theater and the dance—indeed, you must be.

KINGSTON N Y NOV 11, 1926.

It has been pointedly said that we may be radicals in youth when we have nothing, but in maturity we want the laws that protect property and the fruits of labor Outside of the great cities there are few Americans over thirty who have not become property owners at least in a small way This is the short but sufficient explanation of why the career of Eugene V Debs in spite of his abilities was a failure measured in terms of actual results

In The American Mercury's article "An Adventure in Georgia," discussing the journalistic career of Julian Harris, editor of the Columbus Ga Enquirer-Sun, occurs this statement "When the Harrises came into full control of the paper in 1922 they began to call the Volstead act bad names. This was the first breath of any suggestion from any Georgia newspaper that prohibition was not quite perfect" This will be surprising news to Georgians who remember Charles R Pendleton's earnest and continuing opposition to prohibition for the states during the years that he was editor of the Macon Telegraph and previously while editor of the Valdosta Times—powerful opposition based both on personal liberty and religious grounds

COSTLY WHISKERS

So many bearded Europeans still visit clean-shaved America and are observed in the pictures of the noted men across the Atlantic that we are apt to think of whiskers as the prevailing habit But it seems that in Germany there is prejudice against the hirsute adornment of the face and it would appear that if the ex-Kaiser still manages to dream hopefully of a return to power he would be wise to shave According to Samuel G Blythe, correspondent, there is objection to the ex-Kaiser even in German royalist circles on account of his acquired whiskers. "We often talk to small people about the Kaiser," they are quoted, "and frequently hear them say 'No, with this beard he wears I do not like him any more'" But the ex-Kaiser's whiskers have not dampened German royalist aspiration in general According to Mr Blythe, the royalists confidently predict in the future Germany will be obliged to return to monarchial government because the Germans are not fit for self-government and are better off under strong "overlords"

Editor Villard of the New York Nation, who has also been taking notes in Germany, is sure, on the other hand, that the German republic is gaining supporters from the ranks of royalists as well as Communists. Nowhere he says, is there any regret for the former Kaiser or any indication of a desire that one of his sons should one day rule. Mr Villard even reports "a general feeling among the working people that the Kaiser is a coward and should have died at the head of his troops"

THE QUEEN'S DIFFICULTIES.

In her latest published "impressions" our royal visitor says that though it is difficult to be a Queen in one's own country, it is still more difficult to be a Queen in a country "where everybody wants to be kind to you at the same time," and although "it is very flattering to be so much sought after," it "makes you regret that you can not be in several places at once." No doubt there are other difficulties, and perhaps one of them is the awkwardness of Americans when kissing the hand of the Queen The New York World jocularly objects to the criticism that such kissing implies abandonment of the principles of democracy and argues that "a citizen can kiss the royal hand and still remain a 100-per-cent American, eligible to membership in the Ku Klux Klan, the Anti-Saloon League, or any other patriotic order."

But the World is not satisfied with the way in which Americans have been doing it, and observes: "Kissing a hand is a highly technical business It looks easy, but when a novice tries it the spectacle is so dreadful that one almost swoons from horror. And what is the technique? In part one learns, it imposes rigid rules about taking the hand to be kissed One must bend down to it, not lift it One must bow from the waist and keep the heels together Again one must fashion the features into an expression of adoration Again, one must refrain from growing red under the ears Can an American manage these things" He can not Even supposing he achieves the outer seeming of proficiency, he betrays, by some process of telepathy, that he sees himself as others see him and sees a blithering fool"

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M. D.

(Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act)

"DEAD" FINGERS AND TOES.

Perhaps you are one of those individuals whose fingers or toes, one or more, become dead, that is turn white and lose their sense of feeling The appearance is much like wax, the numbness passes off into a tingling sensation and in a little while the appearance and feeling are normal again

Now it just so happens that some serious ailments of nerves and blood vessels will cause this appearance, and they call for treatment from physician and surgeon, but the majority of these cases are not of this type, and you may be worrying unnecessarily

Where the blanching just comes from time to time, not present all the time, the real cause is not definitely known at present Some physicians are of the opinion that it is the glands of internal secretion, thyroid and other glands that are responsible whilst others believe that something temporarily interferes with the blood stream going to the part

Chilling in cold water, or by cold weather, lack of food overwork or overplay 'depressed emotional states", are all blamed for this condition

When it occurs in the fingers it has sometimes been traced to pressure from an extra rib in the neck, and sometimes to pressure from the bag of water under the muscle at the point of the shoulder

And the treatment?

Protection from coldness and dampness is always wise, but the underlying cause should be sought

The application of heat, that is a constant heat like baking of the part in a gas or electric cabinet will often decrease the number of these attacks Massage is often of great service

Hot towels frequently changed is also of help

Wet compresses surrounding the entire leg or arm and covered with a thick dry flannel or woolen stocking frequently renewed, is recommended by a leading United States physician

The general tone of the body should be built up, by rest, good food and cheerful surroundings

Therefore, if you are one of these folks don't get alarmed and think you have hardening of the arteries, and so forth, but after examination by your physician and no organic trouble found, get busy with the simple treatment outlined above

Tories and Indians Destroy Cherry Valley and Massacre Inhabitants November 11, 1778.

The British held Fort Niagara and exercised a powerful influence over the Six Nations, who had become dissatisfied toward the American cause

Congress recommended a treaty with the Indians, which was held at Johnstown early in March, 1778 Lafayette accompanied the commissioners and General Philip Schuyler delivered the principal speech to the Indians The council was not satisfactory, and it was evident that the more powerful of the Six Nations, with Joseph Brant at their head were devising schemes for avenging their losses at Oriskany, and that war was inevitable Attempts to recruit Indians for the Continental service were only partially successful

At Cherry Valley the house of Samuel Campbell was fortified, in the Schoharie Valley three buildings were stockaded, and each garrisoned by troops Forts Schuyler and Dayton (site of present Herkimer) were strengthened, and Fort Plain was enlarged These precautions were not taken too soon

Brant and his Mohawk warriors had spent the winter in Fort Niagara. Early in the spring they fell upon isolated families in the Mohawk region and committed many murders.

In May Brant desolated Springfield, on Otsego Lake, ten miles from Cherry Valley In June he led 300 warriors into the Schoharie Valley, and on the upper Cobleskill attacked some soldiers, killed twenty-two and destroyed the village July 3 occurred the terrible massacre in Wyoming Valley, Pennsylvania

On October 10, Unadilla, on the Susquehanna, was burnt and Oghwaga destroyed by the Americans, the latter was one of the finest Indian towns This caused a bitter hatred among the Johnsons and their Tory followers, as well as the Indians

The most savage of the Tories was Walter N Butler, who was in command of a detachment of his father's Rangers, and had joined Brant The latter was humane toward women and children placed at his mercy, and detested young Butler for his cruelties, but their differences were soon adjusted

The Indians had a bitter hatred for Cherry Valley, the most important settlement on the head-waters of the Susquehanna river, in New York It was known that the Indians in council had determined to visit that place General Edward Hand, who was in command of the American garrison at Albany went in person to Cherry Valley, and upon his return, ordered 200 troops to reinforce Colonel Ichabod Alden who was in command of the garrison of the fort erected at Cherry Valley around a church Colonel Alden was forewarned of the approaching danger, but would not believe the messengers, and was unprepared for the attack

Early on the morning of November 11, during a heavy storm of sleet, Brant and Butler and their followers fell upon the settlement, and killed thirty of the inhabitants, mostly women and children, with sixteen soldiers of the garrison, seventy-one others were made prisoners They burned twenty houses, twenty-five barns and two mills.

The captives were led away in the darkness and a cold storm, huddled together, half naked, with no shelter but the leafless trees, and no resting place but the cold wet ground. They were taken through the wilderness to Fort Niagara

Walter Butler was the arch-fiend on this occasion and would listen to no appeals from Brant for mercy to their victims.

The most shocking incident occurred at the beginning of the attack when the savages massacred the family of Robert Wells, comprising nine members and three servants Everyone, except a son, who was attending school in Schenectady, was murdered. Colonel Alden who was there at the time was killed and scalped.

The savages then rushed to the dwelling of the aged Reverend Mr. Dunlap, and slew his wife before his eyes. His own life and that of his daughter were saved by Chief Little Aaron.

There seems to be no excuse for the failure of the reinforcements under Colonel Klock to arrive before the massacre The distance was only twenty miles When they did arrive they had no provisions or ammunition for pursuit of the enemy. It was reported to Governor Clinton that Colonel Klock "swarmed himself, turned about, marched back without affording the distressed inhabitants the least assistance or release, even to bury the dead, or to collect the small remains of their cattle or goods."

The most barbarous part of the massacre was done by Tories, and Seneca Indians The latter were led by Hiokatoo, a chief whose unparalleled cruelties have been admitted by his own wife, Mary Jemison. "The White Woman of the Genesee"

The stories of the border wars will be searched in vain for a defense of the conduct of Walter Butler, at Cherry Valley, or of his father, Colonel John Butler at Wyoming. Brant included Walter among those who were "more savage than the savages themselves"

With the destruction of Cherry Valley all hostile movements ceased in that region and were not resumed until the following spring

SOMEONE, THE GNOME

"I just don't know what happened to it," said little Mahalia.

"Not knowing what you mean by 'it'," said a voice, "I'm afraid I cannot help you."

"Oh, who are you?" asked Mahalia.

"I'm Someone," said the voice.

"Well, that's nothing," said Mahalia. "Every one is Someone. It's nothing to be Someone. You have to be some one in particular in order to be something."

"Then," said the voice, "you think it is more important to be Something than to be Someone."

"Of course," answered Mahalia.

"Well, I don't," said the voice. "So it seems as though we would have an argument and I doubt if we will have time for an argument and to find what you want to find."

Mahalia was quite fond of an argument, and so she did not mind if she didn't look for the thing she was wondering about.

"I could argue better," said Mahalia, "if I could see you."

"Good! Then you are ready for an argument at any rate," said the voice, and just then there appeared a little gnome with bright, big eyes and dark, dark brown hair, wearing a green suit with gold buttons and a green cap.

"You see I am Someone," said the Gnome. "In fact Someone is my name. Now to be something is just to be an object, but to be Someone is to be a creature of some kind or another."

"Oh, yes," said Mahalia, "but if you're only Someone you aren't really

There Appeared a Little Gnome.

of so much importance as though you were Someone in particular."

"That's where you make such a mistake, such a great mistake," said the Gnome.

"You see if I were just someone in particular I might be a particular person named Lucy, or Henrietta, or Alice, or Ione, or Ruth, or Caroline, or Billy, or Bobby, or Sam, or Pat.

"As it is I am Someone and that's my name. Maybe you have heard people when they have said, 'Someone must know.'

"Do you know that they are speaking about me when they say that? They may not know it themselves, but that is of little account.

"I know it and all the fairies know it and so do the Gnomes and the Brownies and that's more important.

"When you hear people say, 'Someone must understand, but I don't,' they mean me.

"When people say, 'Someone may be able to do all these lessons but I can't,' they mean me, for lessons are of no trouble to me.

"No trouble at all. That's why I don't have to bother about them. So you see I was right, don't you?"

"Well, I'm not so sure," said Mahalia.

"Ah, ha," laughed the Gnome. "That's the way to argue. Never admit you're wrong and you can feel partly right!

"But now that I think I've won the argument, what was it you were looking for? I do love a jolly argument where no one gets cross.

"I wondered what had become of the last hour. I looked at the clock and it was a whole hour later than I thought it should be."

"Ah, there is where Someone can help you too. That hour never got lost as you may think.

"No hour ever got really lost. There has always been Someone or even many to see that an hour never entirely got lost.

"Some may be wasting the hour or letting it slip by, or not realizing that it has passed, but not a single hour ever lost its way."

Don't Want to, but Does

A small boy came up the street dragging his wagon in which was a small dog, standing stiff-legged, and looking most disconsolate. When left in front of the drug store the dog waited patiently for the boy's return.

When he came out I asked him, "Does your little dog like to ride?"

He answered soberly, "He don't want to, but he 'does.'"

Use for Parasol

Little Mary, aged six, who lived in a small country town, was trudging home from school one noon when a few big drops of rain began to fall.

She stopped at a nearby house and asked for a parasol. The young woman who answered her asked her why she wanted one, whereupon she replied in a disgusted voice, "Can't you see it's a-rainin'?"

Strong Appeal in Red Cross Poster

THIS new American Red Cross poster, the work of Lawrence Wilbur, is regarded as one of the most notable of Red Cross Roll Call posters since the world-famous "Greatest Mother in the World" design of war days.

More than 150,000 copies of this new poster, displayed in every county of the United States, will be used to call attention to the enrollment campaign of the American Red Cross, for 1927 membership. For this purpose the Red Cross will launch the Tenth Annual Roll Call of members on Armistice Day, November 11, and continues the appeal until Thanksgiving, November 25, this year. Through membership the Red Cross derives support for its varied activities from the duty of extending relief in disaster, to the equally important service for disabled veterans, together with many other responsibilities which are obligations of the organization under its charter from Congress.

The hot, nourishing breakfast children need is so easy, so quick!

Busy mothers appreciate the new way of milling oatmeal, so that it no longer demands long cooking. For they always realized that children, especially, should have oatmeal often—it is so rich in the food elements they need.

More and more attention is being paid to the needs of children during the important years of rapid growth. Meals should be planned, authorities declare, to include plenty of the growth foods.

The tissue-building substance called protein is absolutely necessary for growth, and children need a certain amount of it every day. One-fourth of this daily need is supplied by a cup of Quick Mother's Oats with a cup of milk.

Like the Mother's Oats which mothers have relied on for so long, Quick Mother's Oats is made with painstaking care by millers who have had 50 years of experience.

that which we expended during the war.

Losses Go On Forever.

In time this damage can be repaired, but there are irreparable losses which will go on forever. We see them in the vacant home; in the orphaned children, in the widowed women, in the bereaved parents. To the thousands of the youth who are gone forever must be added other thousands of maimed and disabled. It is these things that bring to us more emphatically than anything else the bitterness, the suffering, and the devastation of armed conflict.

It is not only because of these enormous losses suffered alike by ourselves and the rest of the world that we desire peace, but because we look to the arts of peace rather than war as the means by which mankind will finally develop its greatest spiritual power. We know that discipline comes only from effort and sacrifice. We know that character can result only from toil and suffering. We recognize the courage, the loyalty, and the devotion that are displayed in war, and we realize that we must hold many things more precious than life itself.

'Tis man's perdition to be safe
When for the truth he ought to die.

But it can not be that the final development of all these fine qualities is dependent upon slaughter and carnage and death. There must be a better, purer, process within the realm of peace where humanity can discipline itself, develop its courage, replenish its faith, and perfect its character. In the true service of that ideal, which is even more difficult to maintain than our present standards, it can not be that there would be any lack of opportunity for the revelation of the highest form of spiritual life.

Armistice Did Not End War.

After asserting that the armistice of 1918 "did not mark the end of the war, for the end is not yet." Mr. Coolidge declared for adequate military, naval and aviation preparedness while he emphasized that the United States does not seek to be a military power and "cherishes no imperialistic designs". At the same time he reiterated the desire of the Washington government for a lessening of competitive armaments.

"We have at last entered into treaties with the great powers," he said, "eliminating to a large degree competition in naval armaments. We are engaged in negotiations to broaden and extend this humane and enlightened policy and are willing to make reasonable sacrifices to secure its further adoption."

Adjustment of War Debts.

In mentioning the war debts owed the United States by foreign countries and their adjustment, Mr. Coolidge again emphasized that "moderation is a mutual international obligation".

"Our government," he said in this connection, "has steadily maintained the policy of the recognition and sanctity of international obligations and the performance of international covenants. It has not believed that the world, economically, financially, or morally, could rest upon any other foundation. But such a policy does not include extortion or oppression. * * * We have therefore undertaken to deal with other countries in accordance with these principles, believing that their application is for the welfare of the world and the advancement of civilization."

Willing to Trust Others.

Reports that Europe dislikes America were met by the President with the statement that he wanted "to be sure that the attitude and acts of the American government are right," and that he was "willing to intrust to others the full responsibility for the results of their own behavior."

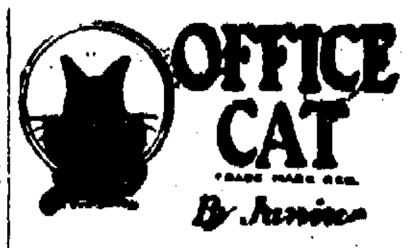

"If we are to have peace," he asserted, "we are to live in accordance with the dictates of a higher life. We shall avoid any national spirit of suspicion, distrust, and hatred toward other nations. The Old World has for generations indulged itself in this form of luxury. The results have been ruinous. It is not for us who are more fortunately circumstanced to pass judgment upon those who are less favored. In their place we might have done worse. But it is our duty to be warned by their example and to take full advantage of our own position. We want understanding, good will, and friendly relations between ourselves and all other people. The first requisite for this purpose is a friendly attitude on our own part. They tell us that we are not liked in Europe. Such reports are undoubtedly exaggerated and can be given altogether too much importance. We are a creditor nation. We are more prosperous than some others. This means that our interests have come within the European circle where distrust and suspicion, if nothing more, have been altogether too common. To turn such attention to us indicates at least that we are not ignored.

Responsible for Ourselves.

"While we can assume no responsibility for the opinions of others we are responsible for our own sentiments. We ought to be wise enough to know that in the sober and informed thought of other countries we probably hold the place of a favored nation. We ought not to fail to appreciate the trials and difficulties, the suffering and the sacrifices of the people of our sister nations, and to extend to them at all times our patience, our sympathy, and such help as we believe will enable them to be restored to a sound and prosperous condition."

There was little need to inquire how the world war began, Mr. Coolidge said in discussing the conflict.

"Nothing is to be gained from criminations and recriminations," he declared. "We are attempting to restore the world to a state of better understanding and amity. We can even leave to others the discussion of who won the war. It is enough for us to know that the side on which we fought was victorious."

"Well, mummie," came the reply, "he's got such bad manners. He spits on his feet and wipes them on his face."

Slang is fruitful, for instance, a peach had a date with a prune and when she handed him a lemon he went plum crazy.

Confusing.

The employer called his secretary. "Here, Jenks, take a look at this letter. I don't know whether it's from my lawyer or my tailor. They are both named Smith."

And this is what Jenks read: "I have begun your suit. Ready to be tried on Thursday."

We Know Something of Feet as Well as Shoes

IF YOUR foot were merely a bone structure, it would be comparatively simple to shoe properly.

But the foot is an extremely ingenious structure of muscles, tendons, nerves and loosely jointed bones. It is resilient, sensitive to pressure, easily forced out of shape, constantly flexing in the motions of walking.

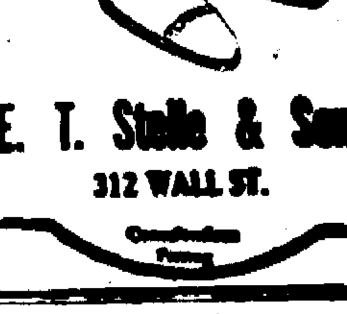

It is because these physiological facts are recognized by the makers of the

Cantilever Shoe

(For Men, Women and Children.)

that they have succeeded in producing a shoe which affords such unusual comfort and ease in walking.

Because we, too, have studied feet as well as shoes, we are able to help you select the size, width and last most suitable for you.

MOTHER WINS BABE HELD ON BOARD CLAIM

Court Gives Her Child and Permits Payment of Debt on Installments.

Fort Worth, Texas.—L. E. McCollum is much like other three-year-old chaps, except perhaps that he's quicker with his smiles and more generous with a certain, delightfully deep chuckle. He doesn't look like contested property, but the state of Texas heard the pleas of two women, mother and foster-mother, each suing for the right to his smiles and tears.

Judge Bruce Young, acting on the writ of habeas corpus brought by the mother, took the baby out of the care of Mrs. Bertha Hunter and placed him in the custody of his aunt, Mrs. L. E. Ragsdale. The young mother, Mrs. Effie McCollum, was given the right to see him at any hour of the day, but forbidden to take her son out of the county or take him away from the Ragsdale home at night. The child was placed under the general supervision of C. E. Maker of the Juvenile court, who is to keep Judge Young informed of his welfare.

Mother Walks Out With Babe.

The mother walked from the courtroom with the little fellow's arms tight around her neck. From another door the sad-eyed woman who has had the care of the little baby since last November left the room, lonely and empty-armed. Her eyes were red from crying. L. E. McCollum had been her daily care for almost a year.

Mrs. McCollum, the mother, placed her baby boy in Mrs. Hunter's care with the understanding that she was to pay his board, according to the story told Judge Young. Mrs. McCollum has been working in a cafe. It was impossible, she said, for her to care for the baby and work for a living at the same time. The child's father was last heard from in Marietta, Okla., where he went following a separation from his wife.

The baby's board bill, paid regularly for a time, became long overdue, according to Mrs. Hunter's claims. The sum amounted to $130. Mrs. McCollum pleaded illness. Two weeks ago, when the mother sought to take the boy away from his boarding house, the foster mother protested, demanding the board money and proclaiming her own affection for the little fellow. The habeas corpus suit followed and the little boy left his foster home after an hour in the courtroom.

Lives With Widowed Daughter.

Mrs. Ragsdale, the aunt in whose custody the baby was left, lives with a widowed daughter and an orphan grandchild.

The young center of the dispute, joyous at an outing and at being with his mother, accepted his new life with no more comment than a hug. While the two women waged a legal battle for him, he smiled first at the judge, then at his mother.

Mrs. McCollum is to pay off her debt to the Hunter family in $5 installments, according to the arrangements completed during the hearing.

Revolver Fails, Chokes Heroine to Save Play

London.—Michael Hogan had to do some very quick thinking recently to keep a performance of Dostoevski's "The Idiot" at the Little theater from going to pieces when the revolver with which he was supposed to kill the heroine failed to go off.

Improvising the line, "I can't do it," he threw the weapon away and choked the heroine to death so realistically that persons in the audience who are familiar with the play did not realize there was a hitch in action.

Miss Stella Arbenina, who was acting the role of the murdered heroine, got a bad fright.

"Before I knew what was going on I found myself on my knees screaming and Mr. Hogan was clutching at my throat in a way that made me think he was mad. My throat is still sore, but it is wonderful that he was able to save the scene," she said.

The Decorative Value of Large Pictures.

If I were asked what one fault rendered the interior of many homes ineffective, I think I would say, too many small pictures on the walls. A living room of noble proportions with ample wall spaces can be utterly spoiled by being dotted—yes, dotted is the word—with pictures ranging from ten to eighteen inches in size.

Such small pictures as this are entirely out of proportion to a room of any fair dimensions, especially if there are no big pieces of furniture to rise against the wall space and help to fill it up. The dignity of a spacious living room is lost without at least one or two large mural decorations, or even more, unless there are a good many windows to break the wall spaces.

Not long ago I sat in a beautiful home where the entrance hall, living room and dining room opened into each other with wide rough-plastered arches showing no woodwork whatever. There were very few small pictures on the walls, and what there were had been gathered together in a well-arranged group that had the value of a large picture. Over a long divan against one wall was a color print in quiet rich tones. It formed a background that had the effect of a tapestry. It hung low above the couch and was nearly as long as that piece of furniture.

Over the stone mantel at the other end of the room was a long dusky oil painting, a copy of a master. In another broad wall space hung an oriental rug, with a massive carved chair below it. There was an entire absence of petty pictures.

If small pictures are used in spacious rooms, they should not be streched at regular intervals here and there over the wall, but gathered together into panel-shaped groups, or perhaps hung in the narrow space between two windows. They should never be flung meaninglessly over the surface of a large side wall, like bits of paper afloat on a river.

Willed Teeth to Sister

When one of two aged sisters died recently in Australia it was learned that though neither had any of their natural teeth, the deceased did possess a set of artificial teeth. These she bequeathed to her sister, who took possession of them after the funeral. She was indignant when she discovered the teeth did not fit her.

On motion of Supervisor Edward Young certificates of election were directed to be issued to the candidates having had the highest number of votes for the various county offices.

Black Silk Lace Used for Afternoon Dress

This smart dress, ideal for milady's afternoon tea, is made of black silk lace and georgette, and is worn with a slip of flesh satin.

Crepe Satin Favored

Crepe satin is a favored medium for afternoon frocks. In one fall collection the dressier afternoon frocks are of two kinds—one comprising those made in crepe satin, velvet or moire. These dresses are rather severe of cut and those made in crepe satin are very often in black trimmed with white.

When You Build

Eleanor Gunn On Fashions

The Abbreviated Coat Scores, Especially for Sports—Capes Ending Midway Are an Evening Possibility in Both Fur and Velvet.

The short coat bids fair to develop from a fad to a fashion. There are many really good-looking short fur models to be worn as a supplement to the velvet skirt and jumper, and there are any number of effective sports coats of abbreviated length, not the least important being leather. Suede has more friends perhaps than the glaced leather our Parisian cousins and our English ones too, find such a protection from not only rain but dust.

There is the usual tendency observed rather generally this season to feminize things, so that even the leather coat has lost something of its masculine flavor. Unusual but none the less interesting combinations have been formed of suede and fur, especially flat furs, which have a very definite place this season. That fur fabric should also be offered and accepted comes not at all as a surprise, especially when one has seen the really elegant representations of broadtail, a pelt that still ranks high.

A Belted Jacket of Red Suede Reveals Strapped Sleeves, Boyish Collar and Center Buttoning, Worn With Novelty Woolen Skirt and Hose.

The short coat has also been experimented with in velvet, with and without fur, and in kasha, a delightful example of which is a model by Jenny that happily unites jungle green and gray kasha, the gray outlining certain sections of the jacket and, if memory serves correctly, also lining it.

The short coat brings to mind the short cape, a garment that has some chance, we should say, of registering for evening, when the fabric is velvet or when fur is the choice. All this is in tune with the two-piece and contrasting material ideas, both of which have proven their worth.

Sport Rings Are Among Latest in Jewelry Fad

Along with the unprecedented vogue for jewelry in one form or another there has come about a renewed interest in rings. In place of the sedate signet or the very much bejeweled ones there are the sport ring and others. Being just novelties, many of these rings are selected for wear with a certain necklace, pin or ornament of some kind. The sport rings are offered chiefly in colored enamels, with or without marcasite settings. In the other rings semi-precious stones are used singly and match other jewelry worn or give an individual decorative note to the entire costume.

Large square-cut emeralds, sapphires and amethysts, with a fine border of rhinestones, may be selected for afternoon occasions. Onyx, too, is much in evidence, but remains the choice of many for evening use. Large rhinestone rings with intricate engravings or with designs outlined in fine pearls or very tiny rhinestones are a beautiful complement to any evening gown. With these rings, too, are used colored stones, but the season's preference seems to be for combinations of rhinestones and pearls.

Sport Dress Is Holding Its Own in Fall Wear

Despite the fact that fall is an extremely dressy season of velvets, metal brocades and lustrous silks, the sport dress is not neglected. Women have found that the sport dress is indispensable and gives more elaborate frocks. For outdoor sports it is by all means the smartest thing one can wear.

The two-piece dress is still sponsored by smart gown houses although it is varied a bit this season by using two contrasting colors or by introducing the bloused bodice. Jersey and crepella are the favored materials. The blouse may be of contrasting colors to the skirt or the two-colored idea may be carried out on the jumper only.

For instance, a jersey dress of burnt orange has two large squares of black jersey appliqued on front and rear of the bodice forming a plaid idea while the skirt is carried out in the major color, orange. White wool feather-stitching joins the black squares to the orange material. Purplish reds and wine colors are particularly stressed in sports wear this year. Jumpers of purplish red jersey cloth combine with navy blue jersey skirts. Again the bright color may be used as banding on a darker and contrasting color.

In getting away from the simple straight lines of the average two-piece jumper dress we find jumpers which are made very long and tight at the bottom so that they may be pulled up to fit snugly about the hips and form a blouse. Some models have the blouse held in by a stitched-on belt with a fitted peplum falling below the belt. Black is a very smart color this season for sport wear and many bright colored sport frocks are combined with a slender black kasha coat. The small black felt hat is one of these meeting with most success.

Velveteen jackets worn with velveteen or jersey skirts are also included among the smart sport outfits. Deep blues, browns, fine reds and greens are popular shades for these models. Skirts of most of the sport frocks are plain except for two or three plaits at the front or side front. Lengths are shorter for sport wear than for dress wear.

Glass Affected by the Sun

Any glass is subject to discoloration when exposed to bright sunlight, especially .. decolorizers are used in correcting the color of the glass. If the sun's rays fall on a portion, the rest remaining in shadow, it is possible that differences in temperature may cause the glass to break.

World's Largest Bell

The biggest bell in the world is to be found in a huge pagoda at Mingoon, Burma. It is suspended from immense cannons, and the actual weight is unknown, but an authority says it is "the largest in the world, and can easily hold within it a picnic party of fifty people."

TASTY GOOD THINGS

A fresh beef tongue if boiled until tender, then cooled and skinned, is delicious baked. Place in a baking pan and cover with celery, carrots and plenty of the broth and bake for two to three hours, basting often. This is a dish nice to serve for dinner when company is not sure of arriving on time, as it will not harm by standing for an hour or more in the oven, being ready to serve instantly.

Salmon Luncheon Dish.—Heat a can of salmon before removing the fish from the can. Turn out on a hot platter, remove the skin and bones and surround the fish with riced, mashed potato. Pour round the potato a rich white sauce and set the platter into a dripping pan of hot water. When thoroughly hot serve garnished with bits of parsley.

Orange Cream Pie.—Beat two egg yolks and add one-half cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of flour and one of cornstarch; cook in a pint of milk, adding the grated rind of an orange. Beat the egg whites stiff and spread over the pie after it has baked, until thick. Add sugar and orange juice to the whites, then brown.

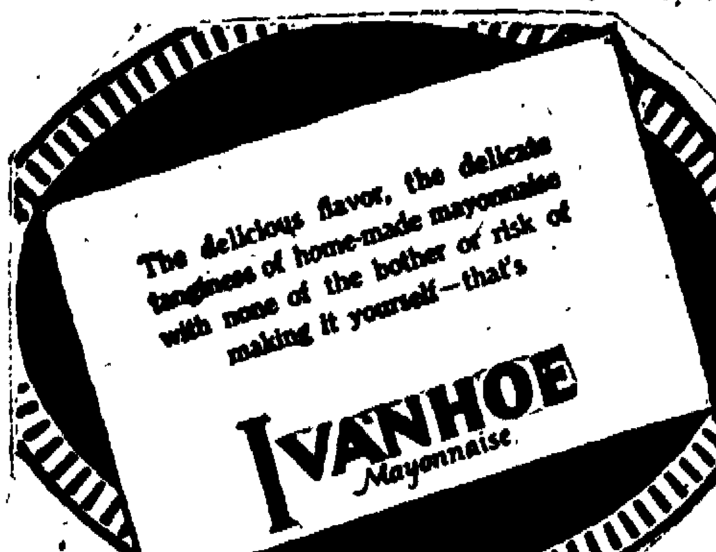

A regular custard pie may be treated thus: Bake it with orange rind for flavor, then when baked cover with an orange sauce made with a little sugar, flour, orange juice and a bit of butter and water cooked together. Spread this over the custard, then top with the meringue and brown. The combination is unusual and inviting.

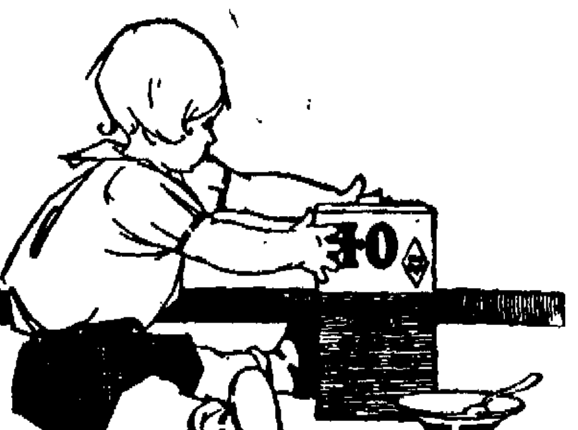

An ordinary white cake baked in a sheet and covered with a rich cooked orange sauce, then topped with a frosting, is delicious. It is called orange meringue cake. Lemon is fully as good served in the same way.

Chocolate Pie.—Melt two squares of chocolate, add half a cupful of sugar, four tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, a pint of milk, three egg yolks and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Cook the mixture until thick before adding the eggs. Pour into a baked pastry shell and cover with a meringue made from the egg whites.

NEWS AND NOTES OF AUTOMOBILE TRADE

Following the close of the most prosperous year in its history the Packard Motor Car Company has just distributed a handsome bonus among Packard employes. Distribution of cash rewards for service with the company has been a Packard custom in prosperous periods for a number of years. Workers who have been with the company five years receive $50. For each additional year $10 is added up to and including 10 years of service. Ten year men receive $100.

The recent introduction of Series 36, Pierce-Arrow's new high powered car, was followed by an 89 per cent increase in shipments of dual valve models from the factory during the month of October as compared to the preceding month, according to an announcement by L. E. Corcoran, general sales manager.

Thirty-eight and six-tenths miles to the gallon of gasoline is the economy record established by 5,205 Overland Whippet drivers during "Whippet test week" staged recently by Willys-Overland dealers throughout the nation to demonstrate the efficiency, economy, power, speed and stamina of this light 4-cylinder car.

The Chevrolet Motor Company is spending $1,500,000 on the installation of a radically new system of replacement parts distribution which executives declare will assure uniformly prompt service for every Chevrolet owner in the United States. The plan involves the establishment of six new major supply depots throughout the country. In a service way it supplements the greater production capacity which will be available after completion of the $10,000,000 Chevrolet factory expansion program. One of the new supply depots, in which will be stored reserve parts stocks will be located at Tarrytown, N. Y.

ENDURED AGONY FROM BRUISES AND STRAIN

Hurt in bad fall, young woman makes quick recovery

A young woman at Bushnell's Basin, Monroe County, New York, fell and was badly bruised and strained.

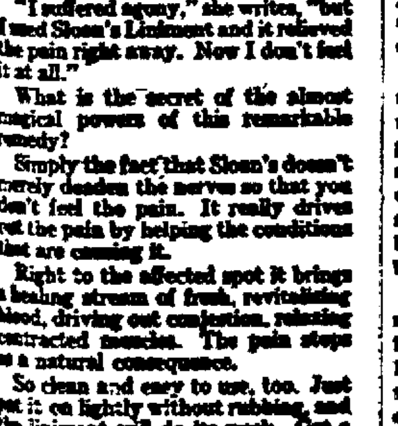

"I suffered agony," she writes, "but I used Sloan's Liniment and it relieved the pain right away. Now I don't feel it at all."

What is the secret of the almost magical powers of this remarkable remedy?

Simply the fact that Sloan's doesn't merely deaden the nerves so that you don't feel the pain. It really drives out the pain by helping the conditions that are causing it.

Right to the affected spot it brings a healing stream of fresh, revitalizing blood, driving out congestion, relaxing contracted muscles. The pain stops as a natural consequence.

So clean and easy to use, too. Just pat it on lightly without rubbing, and the liniment will do its work. Get a bottle today and have it on hand. All druggists have it—35 cents.

Having your eyes examined here means that the right glasses are fitted—the first time.

As Told by Irvin S. Cobb

PONTO'S FATAL ERROR

AN AMERICAN newspaper man was coming home from Europe one summer on a British liner manned and officered exclusively by Britishers. The Yankee sat at the pursuer's table. All his table mates were Englishmen. One evening at dinner the purser was inclined to do a little "spoofing" at the expense of the American.

He began by telling of a trip he claimed to have made on a steamship which passed through an enormous school of whales off the Newfoundland banks.

"All of them were sound asleep," said the purser with a wink to a gleeful fellow countryman, "and all of them were snoring. The noise was deafening."

"It must have been," said the correspondent; "but when I was a boy out in Cincinnati, Ohio, there used to be a whistling whale that lived in the ocean just in front of my father's house. His name was Ponto and he would answer to it—answer by whistling. You see, his blowhole was clogged with barnacles and every time he spouted he made a sound like a siren on a fireboat.

"Ponto was a great pet with all the ships that traded in and out of Cincinnati. The pilots got to know him, and when they were entering port and saw Ponto cruising about in the channel they would signal him and he would signal back, always giving the correct number of blasts. But he's dead now—poor old Ponto!

"One day there was a freighter coming in from Covington, Ky., and Ponto tried to pass her, headed out. But he got confused and gave the whistle for going to the port side when he meant the starboard, and the freighter ran him down and stove in four of his compartments, and he sank in nine minutes, whistling for help to the very last."

After which a silence befell at the purser's table.

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

BY JOSEPH KAYE

At twenty-one Sir Phillip Gibbs was an editor.

"AT TWENTY-ONE I became one of the editors of Cassell and Co., the English publishers. Three years later I was the head of a literary syndicate and the next year I became a member of the press.

"When I first entered Fleet street the social status of press men was much lower than at present, when the pendulum has swung the other way, so that newspaper proprietors wear coronets and the purlieus of Fleet street are infested with barons and baronets, and even reporters have been knighted by the king.

"In my early days a journalist did not often get nearer to a cabinet minister than the hall porter of his office. It was partly his own fault, or at least the fault of those who paid him miserably, because the old time reporter—before Northcliffe, who was Alfred Harmsworth, revised his salary and his status—was often an ill-dressed fellow, conscious of his own social inferiority, cringing in his manner to the great and content to slink around to the back doors of life rather than boldly assault the front door knocker. Having a good conceit of myself, and a sensitive pride, I received many hard knocks and humiliations which, no doubt, were good for my soul.—Phillip Gibbs."

TODAY—Sir Phillip Gibbs is the most celebrated war correspondent and international reporter among journalists, and in addition he is a novelist of power whose works are near the stage of best sellerdom.

Pacifists Play In Hands of Reds

Unpreparedness Will Not Prevent War, Major Hart Tells Rotarians —Preparedness Makes Us Ready to Meet Emergencies—Communists Working Through Peace Organizations.

Rotary held its luncheon this week in the erstwhile coffee shop, which for a few days was a tea room, of the Governor Clinton Hotel, and the members were delighted with the new quarters, which gave ample room for the present membership and for future growth.

It was reported that the moving picture projector which the club purchased several years ago is in almost daily use and has several times been taken to the Tuberculosis Hospital where, with the aid of Harry Lazarus in supplying films, very acceptable entertainments have been given the patients. It is also used in the high school and the Y. M. C. A. and will probably be used in the grammar schools. The machine was bought by Rotary for any proper use, free of charge, in any public or charitable movement.

Resolution on Mayor Block.

President Hathaway spoke briefly of the loss sustained by the city in the death of Mayor Block, a man regarded by all, regardless of creed, as honest, sincere, frank and capable as an official and kindly, humane and sympathetic as a citizen, and the following resolution reported by the club historian, Arthur C. Connelly, was adopted by a rising vote:

"With all the people of this saddened city, the Kingston Rotary Club joins in expressing its sincere sorrow at the death of our mayor, Morris Block, a good citizen, genial gentleman and an efficient and devoted public official of strictest integrity. Mayor Block, in his several terms as our chief executive, exemplified our idea of service and we express to the members of his household our deepest sympathy."

Need for National Defense.

The speaker of the day was Major Ashton Hart, a member of the Kingston Rotary Club, president of the Ulster county section of the Officers' Reserve Corps, a civil engineer by training, a graduate of the Maine State University, who served two years in France on the staff of the Chief Engineer of Lines and Communication.

Major Hart's topic was National Defense and without any screaming of the American eagle or eloquent tommyrot he proceeded to show why some attention to the subject is necessary and to expose the manner in which a large, sentimental and well-meaning element is being led astray by communist plans and propoganda.

Unpreparedness Won't Prevent War.

While anything in the line of military training is opposed by well-meaning persons who think it will lead to war, Major Hart said that the military men are the last ones to want another war. They are fed up on war but they realize that war may come again and unpreparedness is not the way to prevent it. In the 137 years of our country's existence it has engaged in 117 wars and campaigns, of which five major conflicts were waged to maintain what we call American principles and ideals. Taking the dates of these wars, 1776, 1812, 1861, 1898 and 1917, we find that the average time between was about 40 years. While we do not want another war, how can we say that there will never again be one? The time may come again when we must endure violation of principles or fight. Can anyone say that in the five major conflicts we or our forefathers should have done differently?

If we would bring war to a successful conclusion and minimize the loss of life we must be prepared. You do not want your son to die uselessly and you can help to prevent it by maintaining a state of preparedness and training. There is nothing militaristic about this idea.

Regular Army Is a Model.

Under the National Defense Act the Regular Army is the police force, the model for an army. You could put the whole Regular Army in the Yale Bowl. Next is the National Guard, trained to meet minor emergencies and immediately available for limited work. Third is the Reserve Corps, which may be expanded to meet emergencies and which now numbers 100,000 men who receive no pay and do much work. The Reserve Corps is made up largely of World War veterans, but they die or drop out and the corps must be recruited with men to fill the places of the men who drop out.

Led Astray by Reds.

Sources from which recruits come are the Reserve Officers' Training Camps, the Citizens' Military Training Camps and military training in colleges. There is active propaganda in opposition, pressed largely by persons who are sincere but have no knowledge of the facts. There are a hundred organizations, ostensibly to end war, opposing military training and advocating disarmament. Most of these are allied with the National Society for the Prevention of War, a body that has a number of communists on its board of directors. The communist organization has declared itself as opposed to and demanding the abolition of war, marriage, property rights, inheritance, religion and government. In Russia 17,000 of them by propaganda disrupted the army and then seized the government. There are 30,000 of them here and a first step toward seizing the government is the disarming of the nation in the name of pacifism and prevention of war. If we believe our government is a good one, we must be prepared at all times to defend its existence and we must not be led astray by well meaning people who are but Reds themselves but are playing into the hands of the Reds.

DR. GRINTON MAKES APPEAL FOR FIVE POINTS MISSION

November 9th, 1926.

Dear Mr. Editor:

The Five Points Mission begins its eighty-third year with a larger desire than ever to render a practical service to the community.

We are surrounded by hundreds, yes thousands, who live in dimly lighted and poorly ventilated rooms in old style tenements, for which they pay exorbitant rents.

There is little left in many cases for food and clothing. We endeavor to minister to these people so far as our resources will permit throughout the year, but at the Thanksgiving season we desire to bring additional good cheer and happiness to the largest number possible.

Last year more than 500 baskets were given out, containing a chicken and all the good things that go with a real Thanksgiving dinner, also 650 joy bags were given to the children containing cake, nuts and candies.

We are dependent upon the generosity of the friends of the Mission, for gifts of money, clothing, fruits and vegetables, in order to make our efforts a complete success. We appeal to the pastors of churches, presidents of societies and the public in general to help us, in this worth while enterprise.

Please make checks payable to Miss Florence A. Carmichel, treasurer, Five Points Mission, 69 Madison street, New York city.

Thanking you in advance, and with best wishes for a happy Thanksgiving.

Yours cordially,
GEORGE W. GRINTON.
Superintendent.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press.)

Paris—For formal afternoon dress the Prince of Wales is now sporting a low turned down collar and navy blue coat.

Brussels—The formal morning dress of a well-dressed American diplomat is evening clothes. That is what Ambassador Phillips wore at the wedding of Leopold and Astrid.

Mexico City—Wearing of balloon pants is forbidden by the governor of the state of San Luis Potosi. He considers them unmanly.

New York—Worthwhile to tune in next Monday night at 8 p. m., eastern time, on the WEAF chain. Among the attractions will be Mary Garden, Titta Ruffo, Will Rogers, Weber and Fields.

CHARLES BALDWIN ALLEN GIVES FINE RECITAL

Mrs. C. N. Reed of this city has returned from New York where she attended the concert of Scottish, Irish, Gaelic songs and ballads and folk songs given by Charles Baldwin Allen, who is well known in Kingston, at Town Hall on Tuesday evenin. Town Hall, in spite of the downpour of rain, was filled with a distinguished and very enthusiastic audience. The song program was immediately preceded by the appearance of a Scottish Piper in full regalia, whose playing of the bagpipes was immediately followed by Mr. Allen's singing of "The Hundred Pipers." The interest of the program was markedly increased by Mr. Allen's brief but telling description of those songs that were historic or traditional.

As a tribute to Armistice Day, Mr. Allen, accompanied by Roger Mac Gregor,—both in full Scottish costume—sang a group of soldier songs that were given tremendous applause.

The only adornment of the stage other than the "Plaid" covered grand piano was a large bunch of real heather in full bloom, from the Burgevin conservatories of Kingston.

Mr Allen has improved greatly in his concert singing since he was last heard in Kingston, receiving that finest compliment of all, complete silence at the close of his songs, followed by enthusiastic applause, as well as decidedly flattering press notices from New York newspapers.

LAST NIGHT on THE RADIO

Following the worst kind of blooping and other local interference in the afternoon, reception was excellent shortly after 6 o'clock. WTAM. WLS, WSAI, KDKA, WCX, WRC and many other stations were received clearly before 7 o'clock and a few minutes after 7 WJAX, WBAL and WLW were received.

WDBZ was again very satisfactory to those who care for descriptive announcing of a basketball game and the local Major J. Andrew White once more showed that he is a master of the art. Mr. Beichert's voice is excellent, his enunciation clear and his description of the rapid fire order that does not keep one in suspense. The crowd noise, while still not sufficiently eliminated, was under better control and did not prevent the listener from hearing the announcer, as it did last week. The program was given through the courtesy of the Jacob Forst Packing Company, packers of Formost smoked meats and Catskill Mountain sausages.

No doubt any fan who sat up and twirled dials after WDBZ had signed off was richly rewarded, as reception continued good.

Monday, November 16, from 7 to 8 p. m., the Willys-Overland Hour will be on at WJZ. It made a hit last week, its first appearance, and will be continued during the fall and winter. The vocal soloist will be Carl Schlegel, baritone, of the Metropolitan Opera.

FEDERATION PRESIDENT GIVES ADVICE TO WOMEN

At the meeting of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs now being held at the Spanish ballroom of the Arlington Hotel, Binghamton, Mrs Thomas B Kattell, chairman of the local committee, welcomed the visiting Federation women on Tuesday morning. Mrs. Mary Garrett Hay, honorary president of the Federation, responded in behalf of the guests in both a serious and humorous vein. She also paid a fine tribute to the present president, Mrs. Dickinson, who in her address sharply scored modern literature as endangering the morals of the young people. She warned the club women to spend less time outside their homes and urged them to familiarize themselves with the sort of philosophy upon which their children are building their lives. Reports of many standing committees were given and considerable stress was laid upon the advantages of departmental work and also upon the need of more efficient county chairmen.

THE FIELD FLOWERS

"IT'S no more than our due," said the golden yellow Butter.

"No more than our due," agreed the Eggs.

And then they recited this piece together, while the other vegetables and things to eat in the icebox listened.

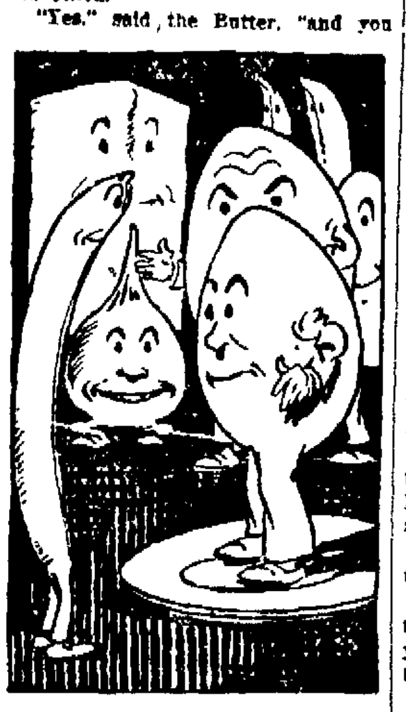

It's no more than our due,
Oh, this is true,
So we tell it to you,
It's no more than our due!

They've named flowers after us,
Yet we don't make a fuss,
No, we don't make a fuss,
Yet they've named flowers after us!

"Well," said the Milk in the milk bottle, "there is Milkweed. That's named after me."

"And I'm enough in myself," said an Onion.

"Yes," said the Butter, "and you

"We Are Proud and Pleased, Too," Said the Eggs.

are so much in yourself that you make people cry."

"Not because they are sad," said the Onion. "I merely make their eyes water."

"Well," said the String Beans in the icebox to the Butter and Eggs, "you shouldn't boast anyway as much as you do.

"And besides that, you are not named after flowers but after weeds. Not such popular weeds either.

"Why, I remember when I was growing upon a vine that they talked about me over the way the Butter and Egg weeds would crowd themselves into the fields.

"They did not like them at all."

"Oh, well," said the Butter in the icebox, "there are always some who won't like you. One cannot be expected to be liked by everyone."

"True," agreed the Eggs.

"And even if Butter and Eggs are weeds," the Butter in the icebox continued, "they are flowers, too. Yes, they're beautiful yellow flowers.

"They have long and interesting-looking pointed ends at the base of each flower, something like a spur.

"And they are of darker yellow inside than they are outside.

"They're just as gay and pretty as they can be and they're not fussy about where they go. They're not snobbish. They're pleasant and friendly."

"Well said, Butter," the Eggs remarked.

"I agree that they aren't fussy about where they go," the String Bean said. "They don't even care whether they're wanted or not.

"They're no pride, no pride at all."

"Pride," said the Butter, "is not to be desired so much as a pleasant and friendly nature.

"I would rather be around a pleasant person than a proud one, even if I am Butter, and even if it is easy to melt me and make me do almost anything."

"A point well taken, Butter," said the Eggs.

"And, too," the Butter continued, "I am proud to have such gay, bright, pleasant yellow flowers named after me. I don't care if they're weeds.

"They brighten up the whole country all throughout the summer. Yes, I'm proud and pleased they're named after me, and my friends the Eggs."

"We're proud and pleased, too," said the Eggs.

"Then," said the Butter, "I don't think it really matters so much what you think, String Bean. I don't mean to be rude when I say that.

"I merely mean that as long as we're pleased that is all that is necessary.

"You haven't been chosen as the food or the vegetable or whatever you wish to be called after which some flower or weed has been named.

"At least if any has been named after you I don't know of it."

"Well, neither do I," admitted the String Bean, "and what you say is really so."

"Yes," the Butter continued, "we're pleased. We think it is nice that when they were naming such bright yellow flowers they thought of us—the Butter and Eggs."

"We're enormously pleased because of that."

"We're enormously pleased," the Eggs said.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"PERSON"

IN THE history of our word "person" for the human being, the individual, we have an illuminating example of the romance that is in words.

It is quite true that not every person is an individual in the strict sense of the word—that is, not all have individuality. Nor can all of us escape the indictment of not being always strictly ourselves! But it would hardly be fair to say that we are all actors, that our personalities are masks!

Yet such is the significance of the word "person!" Speaking in accordance with its origin, that is the implication when you refer to a person or persons! For the word comes from the Latin "persona," meaning mask, and the reference was originally to the masks used by actors in the theatricals of the ancients. Subsequently the term came to be applied to the character who wore the mask, and in its survival through time it acquired the modern significance of any individual.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

BEES AND LUCK

IT IS unlucky to have a swarm of bees come to you. This superstition is general in the United States, Canada and in Europe, and can be traced back without difficulty to a period over two hundred years before the Christian era among the Romans, while there is evidence that it can claim a like antiquity among the Germans.

Tacitus tells of the consternation among the Romans in the consulship of Manius Acilius when a swarm of bees settled upon the cupola of the capitol. It was regarded as a prodigy of evil omen. Among both the cultivated Romans and the Germans when a swarm of bees settled upon a house, it was thought to be a sign that that house would soon be consumed by fire or that some disaster would happen to its inmates. And the Romans evidently considered, also, it is inferred from Tacitus, that the settling of a swarm of bees upon a public building like the capitol forboded disaster to the state.

Just why the Romans and the Germans should consider the settling of a swarm of bees upon a house an omen of evil is not so clear. It is known that they were accustomed to divine by the flight of bees as the Roman augurs divined by the flight of birds, and these bee auguries doubtless became in time reduced to a rigid formula in which the settling of a swarm upon a house had its fixed place. At any rate the American farmer of today who shakes his head forbodingly when a strange swarm of bees settles under the eaves of his barn, or on a tree of his orchard, is a lineal descendant in superstition of the toga-clad Roman, who viewed with alarm the bees settling on the capitol in the consulship of Acilius.

Use of Metal Ceiling Goes Far Into Past

Very little has been written about metal ceilings. Nevertheless, metal ceilings and sidewalks fill an important place in the building finish of today. It is interesting to note, however, how they have come into use, says the Boston Herald.

Metal ceilings, we find in history, originated back to the time of King Solomon. At that time they used metals and hammered them into shape into panels, and from this ancient beginning the start of the metal ceiling industry has worked its way, until at the present time this form of interior finish is used in the highest class buildings throughout the world.

The old artists of ancient times wrought all their panel effects by hammering the metal into molds and various shapes, and as labor did not have the value of today it gave them a chance to lighten up their construction down through the building rather than put in stone panels with the subsequent heavy rich arch supports that were used before the time of steel girders.

Many of the fine old churches on the continent today have large paneled ceilings fashioned out by these ancient workmen and they have withstood the test of hundreds upon hundreds of years.

The metal ceiling industry today has grown into such gigantic proportions that the most modern machinery and, in fact the automobile body construction owes its entire start to the lessons learned from the metal ceiling manufacturers in stamping and [illegible] shapes.

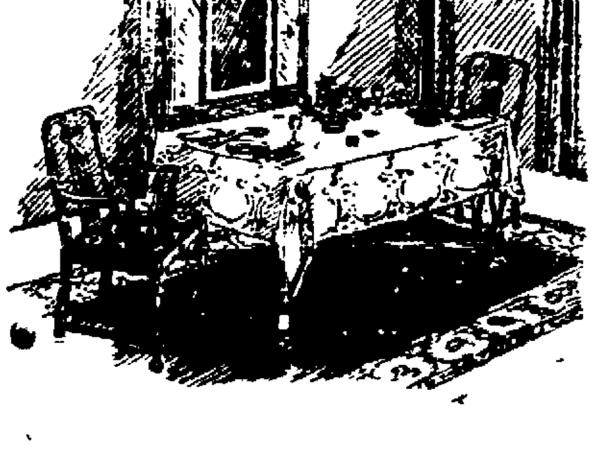

Deceptive Beggars

Throughout the world there are scattered many men and women who have adopted a sort of Jekyll and Hyde existence: during the day they are beggars, but at night they spend their receipts on the luxuries of life. The practice of such double-lives is an ancient one among impostors, and in London various premises are used by these men and women in which to change their clothes. The same stores provide crutches, "blind" placards, cups, club shoes, white wigs and invalid chairs for the beggars who wish to make an appeal to sympathy. Musical instruments are rented to those beggars who try to give a certain value for their money. Some of these beggars dismiss their chauffeurs at the entrance to the store and a few minutes later reappear on the streets arrayed in their "working" garb.

Tea From Coffee Leaves

More than 200 plants have at some time or other been used in the making of beverages. Sage, betony and rosemary once were famous teas in England. In the northern part of the country, raspberry leaves were used for a drink that lingered in favor a century after Cathay shipped her scented product to the Britons. The leaves of the black currant tree were widely used and still are used by some French villagers, according to the Tea and Coffee Trade Journal. Strangely enough, one kind of tea is made from coffee leaves. The beverage from these leaves is said to be invigorating and refreshing. It tastes like green tea. King-Pats Lose To Combination

Three Ridgewood-Orange Men With Grimsted and Powers Trim Morgenweckers—Borgman and McElwain High Scorers.

Armory goers received their thrills Wednesday night. A combination outfit, at first losing by 14 points, turned about and won by a scanty two points. Arriving at the court with but three men, the Ridgewood-Orange crew borrowed two players from Frank Morgenweck's squad. Then after a toilsome forty minutes, this combination array defeated the Kingston-Paterson outfit as a great surprise to the packed armory the score being, Ridgewood-Orange, 38; Kings-Pats, 36.

After the game had already been held up forty minutes, "Chuck" Solodar, referee, stepped to the center of the cage and announced that due to injuries received in an accident, the remainder of the R-O squadron would not appear. Manager Morgenweck had received a telegram stating that the missing players had met with an accident at Tuxedo, N. Y. So Morgie loaned "Swede" Grimsted and Artie Powers to the Jersey team for the evening.

Locals Ahead in First Half.

For the first twenty minutes the fans were silent as the King-Pats outstripped the combination team by fourteen markers, at first, and finally ended the half leading in a 21-12 tally. The contest had advanced only about seven or eight minutes in the second session when the fans were wildly cheering for the Morgenweckers to lengthen their strides, as the R-O club proceeded toward the front, slowly but steadily. By the time ten more minutes had rolled by the disappointed Kingston fans were wilder than ever in their pleadings as the score was tied at 33-33. At this stage, Willy McElwain, the Ridgewood-Orange sensation, unperturbed in the excitement, won the game for his team with his spectacular foul shooting.

Manager Morgenweck stated after the game that he did not know how the game would be treated, officially. He did not know whether the match would be counted as a forfeit or would be played over. But he was of the opinion that the game could not be credited as a loss to the Kingstonians as they would have a right to claim a forfeit.

Combination Was Outclassed.

The King-Pats far outclassed the combination team at the start. The Kingstonians far excelled the R-O team from the passing angle. The Jersey team could do little at the start as their opponents forged ahead for a huge lead. The locals dropped eight fields through the irons before McElwain sank the first double for the visiting team. Garland and Norman dropped in doubles toward the last of the half, building up their end of the score a few points before the half time intermission.

Every man on the R-O combination joined in the scoring in the second session. When the time was half up, these R-O warriors were partly rewarded for sterling work, for they were but five points in the rear. Benny Borgman then almost upset the Jerseyites hard work, single-handedly, sinking three remarkable fields from the playground. But again the visiting aggregation climbed ahead a few paces and, with but five minutes to play, they had tied the score, 33 all.

McElwain, Visitors' Star.

Willie McElwain was the outstanding star for the visitors all through the game. In the late minutes he won the game for his team. The Kingston-Paterson team was playing unusually rough, so McElwain cashed in on this roughness. He had four foul shots in a row and he made them all. Garland also made a one-pointer for the visitors, putting his team five points in the van. With a minute and a half to go the King-Pats tried vainly to get the game back. Artus made a foul and Riconda sank a double a few seconds before the final whistle as two points separated the teams.

McElwain's mate, Norman, also starred for the Ridgewood-Orange team. In the first half Norman took innumerable shots but missed nearly all of them. In the final minutes of the opening session he sank his first field and then made three more in the second half that helped greatly. McElwain with thirteen markers led for his team while Norman followed with eight.

Benny Borgman proved a dangerous man for the winning team, in the second half especially. He came through with five fields in all, giving him the lead in the individual scoring with fourteen points.

Manager Morgenweck had it announced at the start of the struggle that all trips would be made by train instead of auto in the future. As mishaps are bound to happen when a visiting team makes the trip by car, Morgenweck will eliminate the late starting of the game at the Armory by this method.

Harvard Jibes Break Relations

Princeton Announces That All Athletic Relations With Harvard Have Been Broken—Ancient Rivalry Cannot Now Be Settled.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 11 (AP).—One link of the big three chain, strained to crackling point by the jibes of a Harvard humorous publication, has finally broken and carried away with it the most colorful and ancient rivalry of the American college sport world.

Dr. Charles W. Kennedy, chairman of the board of athletic control at Princeton University, announced last night that all athletic relations with Harvard had been broken. A copy of resolutions adopted at a meeting of the board and later despatched to Harvard authorities declared that "Princeton would never accept the implications of the athletic policy recently adopted by the Harvard committee on regulation of athletic sports set forth in their resolution of October 14."

Peace Meeting Averted Trouble.

This section of the resolution is believed to refer to a policy adopted last month by the Harvard athletic board after a "peace" meeting between Yale, Harvard and Princeton officials during which a threatened break over Harvard's proposal to drop Princeton from the football schedule for 1927 was averted. A copy of that resolution of the Crimson policy, which Dr. Kennedy said was received at Princeton only yesterday, provided for Harvard-Yale games every year and contests with others only "intermittently."

After the intimation this fall that Harvard was about to drop the annual Princeton contest, the classic triumvirate issued a statement signed at their conference which declared that relations were amicable and the football series would continue this year.

Harvard Lampoon Jeered Princeton.

On the eve of the annual Princeton-Harvard football game last Saturday the Harvard Lampoon devoted an edition to jeers and insults at Princeton. Copies of the paper were sold to the throngs who jammed the huge stadium at Cambridge for the colorful meeting.

Although the Lampoon later apologized, and authorities at the university joined in admitting the poor taste shown, the feeling of the students of the institution flared into hostilities despite efforts of President Hibbin and the Crimson, another Harvard publication, to pour oil on troubled waters. The Princeton Educator referred to the incident as the work of an "irresponsible minority" while the Crimson described the unfavorable references as obviously in "bad taste."

Reports have been current that Bill Roper read parts of the Lampoon to his team before the game on Saturday. The conflict was conceded to be a rough affair with several Harvard men bruised considerably. One suffered broken ribs in the 12 to 0 Tiger victory.

PORT EWEN TEAM DEFEATED EMPLOYED BOYS.

Wednesday evening the Port Ewen M. E. Seniors defeated the Employed Boys of the Y. M. C. A. on the "Y" court. The game was exceedingly fast and afforded a great deal of excitement to the spectators. The Employed Boys will travel to Port Ewen Monday, November 15 to play a return game.

Interest Grows In Grid Games

Saturday's Contests Between Notre Dame and Army, Yale and Princeton, Supplemented by Numerous Games of Less Importance.

New York, Nov. 11 (AP).—Splotches of color, splashed recklessly on a dozen eastern gridirons by the revival of friendly feuds of long standing, gleam brightest on the fields where Notre Dame and the Army, and Yale and Princeton match their strength on Saturday.

Realization that the Tiger grapple with Yale on the week end is probably the last game of the classic big three annual series, now that Princeton has broken athletic relations with Harvard, has added spice to their contest. The Eli Bulldogs, truly the "under dogs" on this occasion, are plugging away optimistically after three straight defeats, determined to give the Tiger a real battle. Princeton, with Slagle in reserve, ripped gaping holes in a scrub team that included several stars of other days.

Notre Dame is speeding east today; teeth set and determined to revenge the 27 to 0 plastering the Army handed a green team last year, cadet formations troubled the Rockne men in their final practice while the Army scrimmaged until long after dark to make those plays even more effective.

Several undefeated elevens, carrying battle standards against long standing rivals Saturday, are hammering away on weak links in an effort to forge the strongest possible attack and defense for games that in some cases form a season climax. Brown is tearing at the scrubs to prime an attack to sweep Harvard. Information from the cave of the Bear indicates that its eleven iron men are in rugged form for another test of strength.

Sport Briefs Of All Sorts

(By The Associated Press.)

Championship of the "Little Three" of eastern football, Amherst, Williams and Wesleyan, will be decided Saturday when Williams goes to Amherst. With the demise of the "Big Three", the little trio attains its full growth. As a matter of fact, the little three is older in number of games played than the "Big Three", the little fellows having started their series in 1884 and continued without a break excepting in 1902 and 1903.

Little Boy Blue, St. Paul pugilist, who invaded New York recently, has not done any hornblowing but his terrific blows with the padded mitts have scared away many probable opponents. An attempt is now being made to match him with Paul Berlenbach, erstwhile light-heavyweight champion.

Rogers Hornsby's statement that he desires to play only with the St. Louis Cardinals, and wouldn't think of becoming a New York Giant, has started Gotham fans to wondering what McGraw would do with Rogers if he got him. It is understood that McGraw thinks he has one of the best infields in the business with Kelly, Frisch, Jackson and Lindstrom, with Farrell for utility. McGraw meanwhile seeks pitchers and outfielders.

One of the largest football crowds in the history of New York city is expected to attend the Notre Dame-Army game at Yankee Stadium, Saturday. It is estimated that the addition of temporary field seats will bring the stadium's capacity to 80,000. Seats have not been purchasable for several days, except for a few at outlandish prices from speculators.

RUDOLPH HOLDS LEAD IN BILLIARD TOURNEY

Philadelphia, Nov. 11 (AP).—Erwin Rudolph, of Chicago, today held undisputed lead in the tournament for the pocket billiard championship of the world.

He swung into first position by defeating Charles Harmon, Glendale, L. I., last night, 125 to 84. This gave the Chicago cueist four victories and no defeats and broke a tie for the lead with Ralph Greenleaf, New York, who has won three games and lost none.

Harry Oswald, Pittsburgh, suffered his first defeat of the tournament yesterday at the hands of Arthur Ponzi, Philadelphia.

Looking to the Future

When the thoughtful wife of Dick Hughes, a robber executed in 1708, met her husband on the eventful day, she whispered, "My dear, who must find the rope that is to hang you—me or the sheriff?" Her husband replied: "The sheriff, honey; for who's obliged to find him rope to do his work?"

"Ah!" replied his wife, "I wish I had known so much before; it would have saved me twopence, for I have been and bought one already." "Well, well," said Dick, cheerfully, "perhaps it mayn't be lost. It may serve a second husband!"—London Answers.

Info From Insects

Many insects provide the basic ingredient for inks. The brightest red inks are made from cochineal, a dyestuff found in tiny insects that live on cactus in Mexico and South America. These insects are scraped off the cactus, put into a pot over a boiling water which kills them, and then they are dried in the sunshine. A red paste is made by dissolving the insects in ammonia water and this paste is then diluted to the consistency desired when sold.

FOOTBALL IS NOT A GAME OF TIME

Coach Would Decide Games by Number of Plays.

"Football is not a game of time any more than baseball," said Reginald W. P. Brown, assistant coach of football at Boston university. He expressed the opinion that fixing the time of a game by plays rather than by the watch would materially regulate the forward pass.

Coach Brown tried out the play system in several of the Boston university games last fall and this season, and is thoroughly convinced of its success. In his statement, he said that members of the football committee had been invited to these games but that none had attended.

"The game of football," he said, "is a game of plays—four downs to gain a specific distance. It is not a game of time any more than baseball.

"The rules committee had administered playing football by plays for six years, and this year made it optional with the teams. This is on record, although it is not in the book.

"I claim football by plays will materially regulate the much discussed forward pass, as by time the incompleted forward pass stops the watch and thereby extends the actual playing time about 30 seconds, while by plays the incompleted forward pass counts a play. This is a big difference and it stops the dragging out of a game.

"Teams can go from the time game to the play game or vice versa with practically no inconvenience, as the execution of the plays is unchanged. It does away with all inaccuracies of the timing.

"All that is needed is some good-sized numbers such as basket-ball numbers and the words 'More plays.'"

Longest Drop-Kick Was Made Several Years Ago

A record that has stood for three collegiate generations challenges the kicking talent which the 1926 football season will uncover.

Thirteen years ago Mark Payne, a halfback on the Dakota Wesleyan university football team, made a 63-yard drop kick against Northern Normal of Aberdeen, S. D., on the latter's field and none of the phenoms uncovered in the more recent years of football's greater popularity have come within seven yards of the mark.

Payne's powerful boot fractured a record which had stood for 17 years—a 62-yard drop kick which Pat O'Dea of Wisconsin made against Northwestern in 1898.

But since 1904 only three men have made a drop kick from behind the 54-yard line. Robertson of Dartmouth drop kicked 54 yards against Cornell in 1919, and Lamont Johnson of St. Mary's college, Kansas, drop kicked 55 yards in 1925.

Coach Spears Hits Golf Ball Placed on Watch

When Dr. Clarence W. Spears, head football coach at the University of Minnesota, has a new play which he wishes to experiment with, he simply trots 11 of his men out on the field and has them test it out, by using it in a scrimmage with another group of players. But when it comes to experimenting with golf—a sport which has taken most of his spare time during the summer months—that's another story altogether.

The Minnesota coach was displaying his skill at golf before a number of friends on a Twin City course, and being especially confident of his ability to handle a club, he began to demonstrate just how an expert golfer was able to tee off the face of a watch with the crystal up.

He took a "hefty" swing and the ball went sailing into the air, but so did part of the watch.

Champion's Odd Career

Mrs. G. Henry Stetson of Philadelphia, new women's national golf champion, did not start playing golf until the elder of her two daughters was seven years old.

In the seven years that have elapsed since then, although the selection and care of those two daughters kept her out of all but two national tournaments, her game became steadily adequate and it was ready when, the daughters grown, she had the chance to enter again this year.

Sweaters, through universality were new, were unknown to the general world a generation ago. It was the sailors and fishermen of northern Europe who first introduced sweaters into society and set the fashion.

Busy Session Of Supervisors

ported mortgage tax receipts for the year, $28,764.96; disbursements, $37.78; leaving balance on hand November 1, 1916, of $28,727.18. Referred to committee on county treasurer and clerk.

Money for State.

A communication was read from the state comptroller's office stating that the board of supervisors is required to raise by taxation for the fiscal year the sum of $107,984.63 for the following purposes:

For direct state tax at the rate of one mill..	$90,456.85
For armory purposes...	12,471.45
For court and stenographers' expenses.....	5,054.33
	$107,984.63

Referred to committee on appropriations and ordered spread on the minutes.

The amount raised as was required last year was $130,066.37 for direct state tax at the rate of 1.50 mills, $13,944.06 for armory purposes and $5,003.89 for court and stenographers' expenses; the total for all being $149,014.32.

Defer Equalization Work.

When Clerk DeWitt said that he would be pleased if the equalization committee could start its work on Thursday, County Attorney Eckert stated that matter would be deferred for a short time as the report of the state tax commission on its findings in the matter of the appeal of the city of Kingston from the equalization of 1924 recently heard in this city by Mark Graves of the commission could not be had for about two weeks as the commission was busy elsewhere. The ruling would be a great aid to the equalization committee and might save a considerable amount of work to be gone over again.

Supervisor Shults coincided with County Attorney Eckert and made a motion, which was carried, that committee on equalization defer its work until report was received from Albany.

Resolutions Introduced.

The following resolutions were offered and went over under the rule:

Supervisor Furguson—That unpaid school taxes returned be levied with seven per cent addition.

Supervisor Shults—That there be levied on bank stocks a tax of one per cent.

Supervisor Heaton—That the abstracts of town accounts as audited by town boards be accepted and placed on file and amounts be levied on towns.

Dog Money Ordered Paid.

Supervisor Dusinbere—That the apportionment of dog license moneys as made by the clerk of the board be approved and that the county treasurer pay same to the several towns in accordance with said apportionment. Adopted.

On motion of Supervisor Elwyn the board adjourned until Monday, November 15, at 7:30 p. m.

P.-T. A Meeting of School No. 7.

The P.-T. A of School No. 7 held a regular monthly meeting in the school on Tuesday, November 9, at which Mrs. Dederick gave a talk on the meeting of the P.-T. A. recently held in New York city. Mrs. Dederick said that the keynote of the speeches made by the orators at the conference was based on the triangle, parent-child-teacher or parent-church-child. The prize which is awarded to the room having the largest number of parents present at the meetings was given to Miss Van Gaasbeck's class for the upper floor of the building and the lower floor prize was presented to Miss Haines' pupils.

Call Talesmen At Proper Time

Extra Jurors Summoned in County Court Not to Be Called in Cases Until Regular Panel is Exhausted —Arson Case Goes On Trial.

After adjourning from 2 until 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon out of respect to the memory of the late Mayor Morris Block, county court re-convened at 3 o'clock and at that time Deputy County Clerk Walter G. Geroldsek called the list of talesmen which the court had directed the sheriff to draw. These extra jurors were drawn in anticipation of their need to try criminal cases. At the time the order was made authorizing the drawing of the talesmen, Attorney Frank W. Brooks entered an objection to the order of the court and asked that the extra jurors be regularly drawn from the county jury box. Later a formal motion to that effect was made by him, objecting to having the talesmen so drawn sit on any of the cases in which he was involved as counsel. The objection was noted on the minutes of the court, the objection was overruled by the court and the talesmen were summoned.

No Need For Talesmen.

On completion of the roll call of talesmen Wednesday afternoon Mr. Brooks stated that before the talesmen were sworn he wanted to challenge the drawing. He objected to having a number of "regular talesmen" summoned and asked that "new faces" be summoned by drawing through the regular channels from the county box. His contention was that since a regular panel of jurors had been regularly drawn and summoned from the county box, and these men had not been examined and exhausted, there was no need of summoning talesmen until the necessity arose. He contended that talesmen cannot be summoned until the regular panel is exhausted.

District Attorney Traver stated that there was no apparent necessity to draw talesmen until the regular panel was exhausted.

Mr. Brooks objected to the names of the talesmen being placed in the jury box.

Judge Fowler directed the clerk to withhold the names of the talesmen and draw from the jurors regularly summoned until that panel was exhausted.

Arson Case on Trial.

District Attorney Traver then moved the trial of the Isadore Lancer arson case. The selection of a jury was taken up. Frank W. Brooks appears for Mr. Lancer and Mr. Traver and Assistant District Attorney Cleon B. Murray represents The People.

Lancer is charged with arson, third degree, alleged to have been committed on December 27, 1925, when his residence and store property on Albany Avenue near the city line was found in flames in several places. The fire department arrived and extinguished five fires and the damage to the property was not great. The fire was discovered by a passerby in the early hours of the morning. Mr. Lancer had been alone in the house, his wife and family having been away on a visit.

The case was taken up for trial last June but after a jury had been selected and some testimony taken a mistrial was declared and the case set down for trial this fall.

Regular Panel Exhausted.

With eight jurors in the box, the regular panel of jurors became exhausted shortly after 11 o'clock this morning and the court directed the sheriff to draw 15 talesmen from in and about the court room. Under Sheriff Hauleubeek secured the names of fifteen men in the room and presented it to the court. The names were those of men who had been previously summoned as talesmen at the direction of the court. Frank W. Brooks, attorney for Isadore Lancer, who is on trial for arson, third degree, objected to the talesmen and a recess was taken for ten minutes to allow him time to prepare a formal challenge. Tuesday when the 15 men were present in court and were about to be sworn, he objected to their names being placed in the jury box until the regular panel had been exhausted. His contention was then upheld by the court.

Objection Overruled.

This morning when the names were again presented after the regular panel was exhausted he again objected and filed his formal challenge as not within the confines of the provisions of Section 262 of the code.

District Attorney Traver denied the validity of the challenge as not within the confines of the provisions of Section 262 of the code.

Mr. Brooks offered to prove the allegations in the challenge but the court overruled the challenge and directed that the fifteen men be sworn.

The examination of the talesmen was continued.

At 11 o'clock Judge Fowler called the attention to the fact that the day was Armistice day and the Chief Executive of the nation had asked for the suspension of business for one minute in respect to the memory of the deceased boys of our late war and in honor of those living and who were still incapacitated. He asked that business be suspended and all present rise and stand silent for one minute.

Her Banking Account Really an Economy

Angelica did a little mental arithmetic with her fingers.

"Well, I didn't buy anything much—just a dozen pair of stockings, a pint bottle of eau de cologne, two jumpers, a three-piece suit, some chocolates, that little fur tie I've been wanting for so long, one or two—"

"Here, hold up!" I exclaimed. "How much did you spend altogether?" I stretched out my hand. "Let's have a look at your check book. You can tell from the stubs."

But she had neglected to fill them in, so they gave no clew to her expenditure. After an hour's calculation, however, we worked it out at about $125, $25 more than she had deposited in the bank that morning.

"That's what I like about a banking account," my wife said as we went upstairs. "It's economy, really. How else could you make $100 go as far as $125?"

Rock Slide Blocks Storm King Road

Section 20 Feet Long Filled With Huge Boulders and Smaller Stones —Result of Tuesday's Heavy Rains.

A bad slide of large rocks at Cro's Nest near Red Bank, one-half mile south of the roadside fountain, midway over the road, has completely blocked the Storm King highway to traffic. The slide, precipated by Tuesday's heavy rain has filled the cut to a depth of several feet on a section probably 20 feet long according to reports in Highland Falls.

Indications are that the slide took place shortly after midnight for the Storm King buses made their last trip of the night without trouble. At 2 o'clock reports of the rockslide reached Highland Falls.

Great boulders some of them said to weigh 20 tons with a multitude of smaller stones have damaged the roadbed and the fence at the side of the highway. The slide at some points has a depth of 10 feet and others it is from five to eight feet.

Auto Meets Minor Slides.

So far as can be learned no automobiles were endangered in the major slide but there was a report in Newburgh Wednesday that one automobile [illegible] the stone heap [illegible] smaller slides [illegible] of the [illegible]

Fred E. Johnson of the State Highway Department in charge of the Storm King patrol, was reported to hope that not more than one day's work confronts the clearing force. A "floating gang" of road workers kept for such emergencies was summoned through the Newburgh office of the highway department. Air drills and blasting will undoubtedly be needed to move the larger boulders from the road.

Rocks as Big as Autos.

Leo Fanning, motorcycle policeman of Cornwall-on-Hudson, who visited the slide Wednesday, called it one of the worst that has taken place. He said that some of the rocks which [illegible] way are as large as automobiles. They dropped from the [illegible] wall that towers on the [illegible] of the highway. He expressed [illegible] that the road will be open [illegible] two days.

Insurance Plot Fatal to Plotter

Wife Tells Police Her Husband Insured and Then Sought to Kill Her —Met Death in Auto Plunge in River.

New York, Nov. 11 (AP).—George Lupino died today, the victim of an automobile plunge into East river which his wife told police was part of a plot to kill her so that he could collect insurance.

Mrs. Helen Lupino said Lupino recently insured her for $10,000 with a double indemnity clause in case of death by accident. Once, she said, he tried to drown her by capsizing a row boat. Last night, she told police, he invited her to the opera. As they sped away from home, she said, Lupino headed his roadster for the East river. As it was about to plunge into the river, Mrs. Lupino said she leaped to safety.

Lupino was rescued by firemen summoned by a patrolmen who witnessed the plunge. He was taken to the hospital where he died of submersion and internal injuries.

POULTRY PLAY AND MEETING NEXT WEEK

As a result of arrangements completed Wednesday with H. V. Story for the Ulster Park Odd Fellows' Hall (Grange Hall) and Carl A. Wilie for the Lake Katrine Grange Hall, and through the courtesy of D. Ebel and Son, an educational poultry play is being brought to this community for those interested in chickens.

The play is in four acts and its purpose is identical with that of a poultry lecture; that is, to arouse an interest in better methods of poultry management.

The facts are dressed into an interesting form with plenty of comedy to make it really an evening of entertainment as well as information. It will be presented at Odd Fellows' Hall (Grange Hall) at Ulster Park next Tuesday evening, November 16, and at Lake Katrine Grange Hall the following evening. Both performances begin at eight o'clock.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Nov. 11 (AP).—Speculators for the advance regained control of the price movement in today's stock market, which was featured by the strength and activity of the oil and public utility shares. Rails failed to make any appreciable response to the establishment of new freight traffic record and little progress was made by the motor stocks, but outstanding strength was shown by a number of food, mercantile, chemical and copper shares.

Further indications of an easing of the credit situation was seen in the lowering of the rate on bankers' acceptances. The renewal rate on call money was unchanged at 4½ per cent but plenty of funds were available below that figure in the "outside market."

Bear traders offered little opposition to the advance. The borrowing demand for some issues was so large at the close of the market yesterday as to lead to short covering on the first signs of any active buying. United Railway Investment preferred jumped six and a half points, and was followed into new high ground by nearly a score other issues, including Montana Power, Dupont (new stock), Texas Gulf Sulphur, Radio Corporation preferred and Virginia Iron, coal and coke.

Weather Will Be Crisp, But Warmer

New York, Nov. 11 (AP).—The first sharp touch of winter experienced by north Atlantic and midwestern states threatened today to last through tomorrow, but the predictions were that warmer weather, although still crisp, will prevail for the big football games on Saturday.

Sharp northwest gales put an end to heavy rains that drenched New England but not before they averted a dreaded winter drought. Storm warnings flown Tuesday from Cape Hatteras to New York have been shifted farther up the coast, and the wind, which reached a maximum velocity of 65 miles here, is due to abate with the rising temperature. The cold belt extended from Quebec to Tennessee with the frost extending through Ohio, Pennsylvania and Maryland but today was moving out over the Atlantic.

Ignores Chance at Prison Delivery

Sing Sing Prisoner Finds Revolver Fully Loaded While Marching With 400 Others Outside Prison Walls—Turned It Over to Keeper.

Ossining, N. Y., Nov. 11 (AP).—Petro Novello, a first offender prisoner from New York, had it in his power today to attempt a prison delivery on the largest scale in prison history, but withstood the temptation flung in his path by chance. A loaded revolver he found while outside the prison walls he turned over to a keeper.

Behind the prisoner, marching, massed together were 400 other prisoners, all outside the walls, on their way from dormitories 200 yards from the prison, to the breakfast hall inside the walls.

The revolver had every chamber loaded, and was identified by the warden as the pistol belonging to Prison-keeper Harry Quafley who was appointed night patrolman outside the walls about six months ago.

It was supposed by prison authorities that the revolver dropped out of the night patrolman's pocket. Quarley's duties begin after the prisoners are locked inside the walls or inside the new dormintory some distance away, and his duties end before the prisoners leave the dormitory for the prison mess hall.

The weapon was found an hour and a half after the patrolman had gone off duty.

"I have suspended Keeper Quarley," said Warden Lewes. "He will be tried for carelessness. It was an act of carelessness of the most serious kind. There is no telling what might have happened. There is no doubt, either, that the revolver was his."

The warden said that Novello, the prisoner, would be commended for his act and "something done for him."

Evangeline Booth Now Heads Army

Booth Family Squabble Results in Reorganization of Salvation Army Which Leaves Woman as American Commander.

New York, Nov. 11 (AP).—Efforts of the past six years by her brother to dislodge Evangeline Booth as American commander of the Salvation Army have ended with a reorganization that leaves her in the post of national commander.

W. Bramwell Booth of London, commander of the world-wide organization, tried in 1920 and 1923 to remove her on the ground that their father, founder of the Salvation Army, had established shifting officers as organization policy. His efforts brought protests that resulted each time in her reappointment for three year terms. She announced last night that she would continue indefinitely as national commander.

Evangeline and Bramwell Booth of London, as well as Ballington Booth, head of the Volunteers of America, are the children of the late General William Booth. Ballington Booth, who held Evangeline Booth's present position, broke with his father in 1896 and founded the American organization.

Bramwell Booth was named head of the world organization by his father in 1912 and it is said intends to appoint his son, Wycliffe Booth, as his own successor.

Evangeline Booth recently returned to her duties after a long illness.

Business Girls' Club Supper

The Wednesday night supper of the Business Girls' Club of the Y. W. C. A. this week was quite different in character from its predecessors and was hugely enjoyed by all the girls present. The tables were arranged in a hollow square, giving to the supper an unusually chummy atmosphere. The orange decorations and candles added to the cheerfulness of the occasion.

Mrs. Mae Perkins, herself a business girl, told the other girls of her two years' experience at the summer school at Bryn Mawr College with so much enthusiasm and in such an interesting manner that it was evident she made a most favorable impression on the minds of those present, giving them the thought that a trained mind is a business asset.

Then the girls "Played School," and with a lot of fun and nonsense answered a short questionnaire about their own organization with the idea of giving those in charge the data upon which to prepare for the club a "Purpose and Constitution."

One of the big things of the evening was the announcement of the coming of the celebrated Y. W. C. A. woman, Margaret Slattery, who will speak at the St. James M. E. Church on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock on the subject, "The Speedway." Judging from past experience it would be well for all who wish to hear Miss Slattery to be a little ahead of time if they wish to secure seats.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

WINS FIRST LEGION FIDAC SCHOLARSHIP

A year's study in Poland is the prize that has been won by George R. Saxon, graduate of Howard college, Birmingham, Ala., and assistant boys' secretary of the Birmingham Y. M. C. A., as the crowning achievement of a long struggle for an education against heavy handicaps. Saxon has been chosen as the first American student to be sent abroad in an exchange of scholarships arranged by the American Legion through Fidac, the international organization of veterans' associations of the allied countries.

Saxon will attend the University of Warsaw, while John J. Tichey, a Polish student, will come to this country in exchange and will attend Columbia university. Funds for the two scholarships are being provided by the Kosciuszko foundation of New York, which was organized to honor Col. Thaddeus Kosciuszko, Polish patriot who served in the American Revolutionary army. Among the organizers of the foundation are a group of prominent Americans including Willis

George R. Saxon. John J. Tichey.

H. Booth, Samuel M. Vauclain, Col. Cedric E. Fauntleroy, Prof. Robert H. Lord, President Henry Noble MacCracken, Prof. Stephen P. Mizwa and Prof. Paul Monroe.

The record of Saxon's fight for an education is an inspiring story.

"I never remember having seen my father, who died when I was six months old," he said, telling of his life. "At sixteen I was only in the fifth grade of school. We lived in a rural district and I could attend school on the average of only 12 weeks each year. I realized that I could never get very far in the preparation for life at that rate, so, with the consent of my mother I went to a nearby village where there was a good grammar school.

"After I had finished grammar school I went to Albertville, Ala., where I operated a telephone exchange at night and went to school in the day time. I finished two years' work there and was beginning my third when I stopped to enter the army for the World war, which kept me out of school two years. I saved my money while in the service with the hope that some day I might not only finish high school but might go on to college.

"When I returned I finished high school and was awarded a scholarship by a newspaper which paid my expenses through Howard college.

"While in college I sold books in Kentucky and West Virginia one summer and the others I worked for the Central Young Men's Christian association of Birmingham. After my graduation in the spring of 1925 I became a member of the staff there."

Saxon served in the One Hundred and Seventh field artillery, Thirty-first division, and saw service in France. In college he had high scholastic standing and an unusual record of leadership in athletics and student affairs. He plans to continue his Y. M. C. A. work when he returns from Poland.

Keep United and Agreed, Says Foch

Paris, Nov. 11 (AP).—"Always keep united and agreed," is the message of Marshal Foch given to Stephane Luzanne for the million men who fought under the marshal and now are dispersed to the four corners of the globe. The marshal's injunction is printed in the Matin today on the occasion of Armistice Day.

"But about that I am not afraid," the marshal's statement continues. "Veterans will always agree because they understand each other. That is what I told General Pershing when he announced to me that the Legionnaires would visit Paris next year."

The service tonight will be of special interest, and will be known as birthday night. A special gift of a Bible will be given to the largest family present at the meeting. The subject of the evangelist will be, "Which Road That I Take". Mrs. Strathearn will sing "Serving the Lord in My Weak Way".
